

Samaritan's Life 'Hell'

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Preston Henley played Good Samaritan Friday night and he's paying for it today.

He's bruised, battered and terrified.

Life has become hell, he said today, and he's afraid to venture out of the door of his home at 59 San Jose.

Henley, 36, a child care worker, was gang-stomped about 10 p.m. when he intervened after two youths shoved a girl off her bicycle.

Henley, who was out walking with his wife in the James Bay area, went to aid the girl. One youth fled and the other became abusive and threatened to kill him.

Henley said he asked his wife to call police and while she was away the youth who had run off returned with six or seven companions.

The gang surrounded him and the next thing Henley knew he was on the ground and the youths were kicking him in the face and body.

Henley said he managed to break loose, ran to a nearby house, burst through the door and screamed for help.

Police arrived and arrested two 17-year-old youths and a juvenile. The others fled.

The three have been charged with assault causing bodily harm. They were released from custody this morning after appearing before a justice of the peace.

Henley said he spent two hours in the emergency ward of Victoria General Hospital being treated for his injuries.

He said he was threatened by the youths, who call themselves the James Bay gang.

"One told me he was going to slash the tires on my car and burn my house down," he said.

Henley said he is terrified of repercussions.

He said he asked police for protection but "they didn't seem to think I need it."

Henley met today with Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber, who said he will use the hearing-up to press for re-institution of police foot patrol.

Hijackers To Free Hostages

KUWAIT (Reuters) — Arab hijackers agreed today to release all hostages aboard a Kuwait Airways plane in return for the hijackers' safe passage to Southern Yemen.

A number of hostages were released from the Boeing 707 Friday night and early today.

The aircraft was hijacked Friday by 12 gunmen who have not been identified definitely.

Airport sources said two of the hijackers went from the plane to the terminal building for negotiations with Kuwait's defence minister, Sheikh Saad al-Abdullah al-Sabah, who has been conducting talks with the gunmen as the jet stood on the tarmac under Kuwait's broiling desert sun.

It was not immediately known if the hijackers were granted their demand for the release of 300 persons imprisoned in Arab jails.

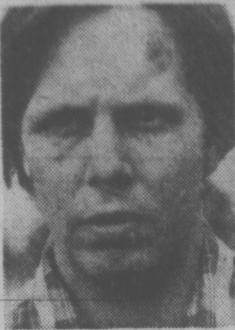

There were about 55 passengers and crew aboard the plane when it took off from Beirut on its flight to Kuwait.

Ten passengers were released Friday night and three of the five British crew members, including two stewardesses, today.

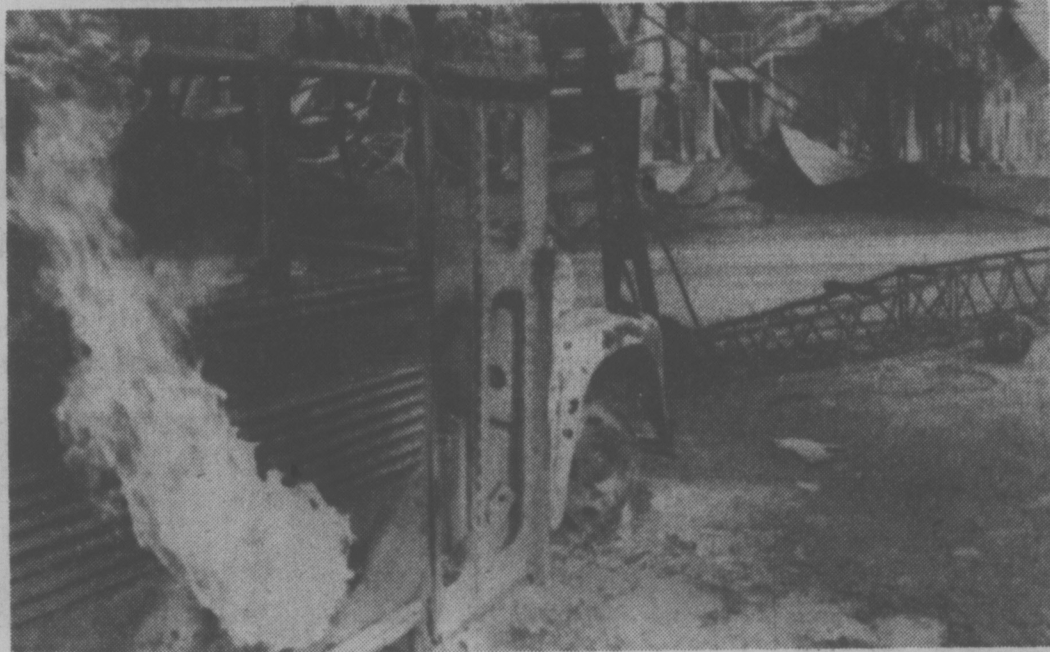

One diplomatic report in Beirut said only seven hostages still were aboard the plane, including Kuwait's ambassador to Lebanon, Abdel-Hamid Bejjani.

trois in the James Bay area.

"There have been too many of these kinds of incidents going on here. It's time something was done," Barber said.

Blast Kills One, Injures Six ... Halts Alaska Oil Flow

PUMP STATION No. 8, Alaska (AP) — Oil will resume flowing through the Alaskan pipeline only after engineers are sure they have pinpointed the cause of an explosion that tore through the main building of a pump station here, killing one workman and injuring six others.

One pump station worker, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press that the explosion was caused by the apparent malfunction of a check valve in the oil pipeline.

The $7.7-billion pipeline was shut down Friday after the explosion and resulting fire left the pump house building a blackened and twisted maze of structural steel. The pipeline itself was not damaged.

Five persons were admitted to hospital after the explosion and a sixth person was treated and released, authorities said. None of those admitted to hospital was in serious condition.

It was the second time this week that Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. had been forced to close the line. On Monday, the first flow of oil through the 800-mile pipeline was shut off for 64 hours after a crack was discovered in a pipe just outside the pump station.

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. officials were unable to say when the oil would start flowing again. The oil flow, which began June 20, had been almost exactly on schedule despite the earlier shutdown.

Alyeska had expected the first oil to arrive in Valdez about July 20.

John Ratterman, an Alyeska spokesman, said: "The preliminary thinking is that we can run oil through the station without using the pumps or turbines. We do not think, on a preliminary basis, that there will be a long down time."

However, if the ministry of transport allows the operation to continue, it could easily disrupt the air transportation system throughout all of northern Canada.

SEOUL (AP) — Torrential rains triggered floods and landslides near the South Korean capital today, killing 159 persons, authorities said.

At least 84 others were missing and thousands left homeless.

Heavy rainfall, up to 16 inches, began Friday and flooded low-lying areas south of the Han River which runs through the heart of the capital.

MEMBERS TO VOTE

B.C. Fed Wants General Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor is asking members to give it power to call a province-wide general strike to block current and any future "union-busting Social Credit" legislation.

"We are asking affiliates to give the federation executive council the right to call province-wide industrial action ... and that includes shutting down the province," federation secretary-treasurer Len Guy said Friday at a news conference.

Guy said union executives throughout B.C. will be asked to determine, by means decided at the local level, whether members support giving the federation power to call a strike. The polling process is expected to take two to three weeks.

"If we have a substantial majority, we'll go ahead," Guy said.

The decision to call for strike-power was made unanimously earlier Friday at an emergency union conference. Guy said it was attended by representatives of most federation-affiliated unions to discuss how to fight two government bills now before the legislature, Bill 65, the Community Resources Board Amendment Act, 1977, and Bill 68, the Notre Dame University of Nelson Act, 1977.

The bills would wipe out four union locals, said Guy. They are the Faculty Association of Notre Dame University (FANDU), a local of the Association of Clerical and Technical Employees (ACTE), and the Vancouver Resources Board locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), the Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union (VTRMEU) and the Social Services Employees Union (SSEU).

Both Guy and federation president George Johnston said the federation will seek a meeting with the cabinet to persuade it to drop Bills 65 and 68.

If that fails, they said, the federation will lobby all MLAs and mount a letter-writing campaign to the cabinet as well as issue pamphlets to "warn British Columbians about the insidious nature of this legislation."

Although only 44 per cent of B.C. workers are unionized and about three-quarters of those (240,000 workers) are affiliated with the federation, Guy said he was confident the federation will receive full support.

He said organized labor in the past has shut B.C. down and "I'm confident it won't be found wanting this time if called upon."

Asked whether the strike call might involve only a one-day stoppage, Guy said: "It would be whatever is necessary."

In Victoria, Labor Minister Allan Williams had no comment other than to say, "We'll just have to see what happens."

He also refused comment when asked whether the labor department had a hand in framing the bills introduced by Education Minister Pat McGeer and Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

Air Canada Talks Break

MONTREAL (CP) — Conciliation talks between Air Canada and its 2,700 flight attendants have broken off and the two sides are waiting to see what Labor Minister John Munro does next in the dispute.

Bernard Belanger, a negotiator for the Canadian Air Line Flight Attendants Association, confirmed in an interview here Friday that conciliation efforts in Ottawa came to an end with no agreement in sight.

Working conditions rather than money were the major stumbling blocks, he noted.

But he declined to list the major unresolved issues, saying no strike vote has yet been held.

Munro can opt for a conciliation commissioner or conciliation board to study the issues and make non-binding recommendations. He could also appoint a special mediator to try to find a solution.

Meanwhile, Air Canada's 1,500 pilots and flight officers have approved a new contract hammered out last month, an official of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA) said Friday.

Capt. Robert MacKinnon, CALPA's chief Air Canada representative, said in an interview that 62.8 per cent of the ratification vote favored the terms.

The contract, which is retroactive to last Dec. 1 and runs until next Jan. 30, includes a 6.1 per cent wage increase and improved duty-scheduling provisions.

Average salary for an Air Canada pilot will increase to about $40,000 from $38,000.

Two Pulp Unions Veto Last Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pulp union negotiators unanimously rejected the final offer of pulp industry Friday, but stopped short of breaking off negotiations.

Employers laid their final position of a $1-an-hour increase over two years before the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) in a morning negotiating session.

The two unions, bargaining jointly, met in caucus session all afternoon before saying they are rejecting the proposal. The unions were to meet again today to determine what their strategy now will be.

Art Gruntman, a spokesman for the joint caucus, said the companies will be informed of the rejection following today's session.

Previous pulp contracts for the 15,500 workers expired June 30. Neither union has taken a strike vote.

The unions said the offer was unacceptable because the employers have not discussed pensions, cost-of-living protection and the banking of overtime.

Both Gruntman and Stan Shevaga, the other caucus spokesman, agreed a break-off of negotiations was a possibility.

The companies stressed that their offer was a final position and there was room for clarification of the package but not for juggling it.

The package included a 50-cent-an-hour increase this year and another 30 cents next year, plus the rolling in of a cost-of-living payment of 12 cents an hour that workers already are receiving in the base rate.

Thieves Bilk Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — A well-organized group of fraud artists has bilked area branches of the Bank of Montreal of a total of $12,000 in two days by impersonating customers.

Bank officials said Friday that the thieves, who had gained access to customer names, account numbers and signature samples, attempted to withdraw $19,000.

On Thursday and Friday, the thieves used their customer information to fill out cheques or withdrawal slips, usually for several hundred dollars each.

The scheme was uncovered in a branch by a teller supervisor who knew the customer whose account was being tapped by an impersonator. The man fled.

Thirteen incidents Thursday netted the thieves $7,000 from Bank of Montreal branches, and six incidents Friday gained $6,000. An additional five attempts to withdraw $6,000 failed, officials said.

Bill Dalton, the Bank of Montreal's administration manager for B.C. and the Yukon, said regular customers can expect a closer than normal scrutiny of cheques and withdrawal slips "for the next little while."

Dalton speculated that the customer information could have come from mail thefts of bank statements.

CARR GALLERY OPENED FRIDAY

The new Emily Carr Gallery of the Provincial Archives of British Columbia was officially opened at 1117 Wharf, Friday. The gallery contains the first instalment of 21 oils, water colors and sketches arranged in chronological order to document the principal phases of Emily Carr's progression as an artist.

Master of ceremonies for the event was L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary, and the principal speaker was the Hon. Grace McCarthy. The invocation was given by Rev. Alfred J. C. Johnson and other speakers were Victoria Mayor Michael Young and provincial archivist A. R. Turner.

Carr works from the Newcombe collection have been augmented by the Provincial Archives holdings, including several large canvases chosen in 1945 by a committee of women members of the legislature.

The paintings and drawings are grouped in periods starting in the early 1890s with Melons (oil on canvas), a typical student exercise thought to be from the painter's San Francisco art school days.

In later periods the influence of her studies in France and of the Canadian Group of Seven appear through the twenties and thirties.

Amin Corrals Professors

NAIROBI (AP) — President Idi Amin has ordered professors at Uganda's Makerere University not to leave the campus, government-controlled Radio Uganda reports.

The radio, monitored here Friday in neighboring Kenya, quoted Amin as saying he was confining the faculty to the campus because of his concern about the "great shortage" of teaching staff at the university.

Many teachers have fled Uganda in fear of Amin's military regime. Amin said he would import lecturers from friendly countries to maintain educational standards at Makerere, the report said.

U.K. Unions Scuttle Restraints

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man
Britain's system of voluntary wage restraints, with which the Labor government has tried to restore the nation's economic well-being, lay in ruins this week, the result of rebellions by several major trade unions.

After a cabinet meeting,

Prime Minister James Callaghan and Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey told the Commons that co-operation with the unions remained possible. But the tone of the cabinet discussions was reportedly gloomy and many independent analysts feared an explosive new round of pay increases.

That, as Callaghan and senior trade union leaders have been warning for months, might well lead to accelerating inflation and pressure on the pound.

A vote Wednesday by the biennial conference of the Transport and General Workers Union, the country's biggest, set off the new wave of pessimism. Meeting here, the 1,110 delegates voted for a return to "unfettered collective bargaining" next month.

The vote was a stinging defeat for Jack Jones, the general secretary of the 1.3 million-member union. He had warned that an end to the pay policy would lead to "a wage scramble, renewed inflation, increased unemployment and new trouble for the pound."

Meanwhile, the Trades Union Congress, the central body of British trade unionism, has been telling the government privately that there was no way it could accept Healey's target of a 10-per-cent increase in earnings over the next year.

Pesticide Rules To Be Tightened

Tighter controls on pesticides have been proposed in legislation introduced Friday by the provincial government.

Bill 46, the new Pesticide Control Act, would make individuals, companies and Crown corporations accountable to an administrator and pesticide control committee.

Introduced in the house by Environment Minister Bill Nielsen, the bill also contains provisions for an appeal board to deal with problems created by pesticide use. It will replace the Pharmacy Act pesticide sections.

The legislation clearly states that B.C. Hydro, a major user of herbicides and other sprays on rights-of-way, and all other Crown corporations will be accountable to the new pesticide committee.

The committee will monitor pesticide use in much the same manner as the pollution Control Board monitors pollution problems.

Bill 46 says no person shall sell or use pesticides unless he holds a valid permit or certificate issued by the pesticide control administrator.

Nielsen said the appeal board, independent of government, will hear appeals on decisions made by the administrator.

The legislation also requires that pesticides must be used for purposes for which they were sold and that pesticide application equipment not be washed in water.

Nielsen said violation of the act could bring a $2,000 fine or imprisonment for up to six months.

But Nielsen said it was not his intention to require every householder in B.C. to be licensed in order to spray the family garden.

"Of course it would be impossible to police individual homes, but the person who sells pesticides to those people will have to be licensed," said the environment minister.

CROSS-CANADA CYCLE TRIP 'FUN'

ST. JOHN'S (CP) — Claude Parsons, 60, of White Rock was none the worse for wear as he arrived here this week after bicycling 4,570 miles across Canada.

"It's fun," said Parsons, who left Victoria May 11 and arrived here Wednesday. His 10-speed bicycle averaged 10 miles a day along the Trans-Canada Highway and secondary roads.

The going was not altogether easy, but only in his mountainous native province was he forced to stop and walk his bike uphill.

Even Kelly's Mountain, a long incline near Sydney, N.S., posed no problem.

"It sounds hard but it's not," he said. "It's blood, sweat and tears going up one side and its lot of laughs going down the other."

Parsons and his wife, who accompanied him in a car, encountered a tornado in Saskatchewan, high winds in Ontario and wind and rain throughout Quebec. Newfoundland had better weather, enabling him to cycle 100 miles on the final day.

Parsons leaves today by car for a leisurely trip home, but he plans to take another trip somewhere next year.

Why does a man push himself to cycle so far? "Ego," he said.

Scientology Accused of Theft Plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government accused the Church of Scientology Friday of carrying out a plot to infiltrate the justice department and the Internal Revenue Service and to steal hundreds of confidential documents.

The FBI, acting on a search warrant and an affidavit detailing the allegations, raided church offices in Washington and Los Angeles to recover the allegedly stolen documents and to obtain any other evidence of the alleged conspiracy.

The U.S. attorney's office in Washington is considering criminal charges against church officials, a department source said.

A federal magistrate issued a search warrant on an FBI agent's sworn affidavit describing evidence primarily obtained from Michael Meisner, a former high-ranking church official who it is alleged supervised covert operations until he was arrested and decided to cooperate with federal investigators.

The affidavit said Meisner is being held in protective custody at his request because he and federal officials fear for his safety.

Scientology doctrine "requires the church attack and destroy its enemies ... and those like Meisner who leave the church," the affidavit said.

It said church officials in Los Angeles kept Meisner gagged and in handcuffs at one point to prevent him from returning to Washington after a series of meetings with church officials in Los Angeles.

Church officials said

Meisner never was more than a middle-level staff member. One church spokesman, Greg Layton, said Meisner was "excommunicated from the church" a year ago.

Other church officials denied the government accusations and responded with their own allegations.

The church said the FBI raids were an "attempt to cover up a massive international narcotics operation known to officials of the U.S. and some foreign government."

In a written statement, the church said that officials of the international police agency known as Interpol are involved in a heroin and cocaine smuggling ring with support from French police and judicial authorities.

A spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Administration termed the smuggling ring charge "patently ridiculous."

On June 20, Meisner called the U.S. attorney's office in Washington to say he had escaped from church officials and wished to return to face criminal charges and "cooperate in the on-going investigation," the affidavit continued.

Based on Meisner's statements and other evidence, the government said "there is probable cause to believe that from 1974 through 1976, officials of the Church of Scientology in Los Angeles and Washington conspired to steal documents from the government" by burglarizing federal offices.

In addition, the church planted one of its members as a clerk in the Internal Revenue Service and another as a secretary in the office of a justice department lawyer, the affidavit said.

Trudeau Alberta-Bound After Vancouver Whirl

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau leaves behind protesters, pizzas and an eight-foot egg roll today, travelling to Camrose, Alta., for a two-hour visit with friends of his newest cabinet minister—Cowboy Jack Horner of Crowfoot.

It's his first political trip to Alberta since 1974 and follows by two months Horner's defection from the Progressive Conservative party.

Officials said Thursday they considered the visit to the 12,000-person farming community 60 miles southwest of Edmonton "unpredictable."

But they conceded it could be no less predictable than the day Trudeau spent in Vancouver, where he spent the third anniversary of his July 8, 1974, election tongue-lashing a prison rights protester, cutting and serving a seven-foot pizza and listening to a crowd shout, "We want an election, we want Pierre."

Trudeau opened the day—the last of a three-day visit to the Vancouver area—announcing a major federal provincial development program and telling his weekly news conference that his government plans to establish tougher controls over Crown corporations.

Then he hopped aboard a so-called sea bus—after buying a 35-cent ticket and vaulting the turnstile—for a ride across Vancouver harbor.

At the other end, he ran into a crowd of about 800, many of them protesting proposed construction of new grain terminals—they would block the view, the signs said—others opposed to nuclear reactor sales and one upset with British Columbia's prison system.

As he mounted a stage to address the crowd, the prison rights activist—white-haired Betsy Wood of Vancouver—came up from behind, unfurled a massive banner and demanded to speak.

At this, the crowd began to sing O Canada and chant "We want Pierre."

CAMPERS DROWN

PARIS (AP) — Four holidaymakers, including two children, were swept to their deaths early Friday when the River Save engulfed their Isle-en-Dodon camp in southwest France. Elsewhere, at least four persons were missing.

A muddy torrent, following torrential storms, snatched a man and a woman from the river bank and they vanished in the current. Under the violence of surging waves, a father was unable to hold on to his two children and they, too, vanished into the water.

Four campers were injured and 45 had to be rescued. Floods ravaged many parts of France Thursday night. Helicopters from the Cazaux airbase rescued 35 people from rooftops in a low-lying neighborhood. One person was reported missing.

In the Villeneuve-sur-Lot region, two people were missing, and at Fumel, a 60-year-old woman was carried away by the flooding Dor River.

In the Toulouse area 4,000 telephone lines were cut, bridges were swept away and in the town of Nevers, water one metre deep covered the streets. Hail seriously damaged crops.

BRITISH PATROL BELIZE

BELMOPAN (Reuters) — British jet planes patrolled the Belize border with Guatemala on Friday as British and Guatemalan negotiators sought to avoid a bloody confrontation on the Caribbean coast of Central America.

An exodus from border areas, touched off by earlier Guatemalan threats to invade, continued Friday. People who stayed behind near the border spoke with relief at the arrival of British military reinforcements rushed to the colony after the latest Guatemalan threats.

About 500 soldiers from the Staffordshire regiment arrived Friday in Belize, formerly called British Honduras. Also sent to the colony were six "jump jet" Harrier fighter planes and the frigate Achilles. The British garrison now numbers about 1,500 men.

Diplomatic sources said Guatemalan President Kjell Eugenio Laugerud Garcia had ordered reinforcements rushed to the border to counter the British military build-up.

Vancouver Break-in Suspicious Says MP

OTTAWA (CP) — There are suspicious circumstances around a January break-in at a suspicious circumstances offices that should be investigated to make sure police were not involved, Stuart Leggett (NDP—New Westminster) said Friday.

Leggett said the International Education Resource Association was burglarized Jan. 29, but the main items found to be missing were tapes dealing with elections in Jamaica.

In the Commons, he asked Solicitor-General Francis Fox if that break-in had any connection with the government's decision to order an inquiry into the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP). He noted that Fox said earlier this week that the inquiry, announced on Wednesday, was prompted partly by an illegal 1972 break-in by the RCMP into a Montreal news agency's offices, which Fox said was an isolated incident.

Fox told Leggett the Vancouver break-in was not a factor in the inquiry into allegations of wrongdoings by RCMP members.

Leggett said outside the Commons that the Vancouver association promotes aid to Third World countries. It would be hard to say whether or not it is a political organization, he added.

He said it is disturbing that the break-in, similar to the Montreal one, occurred only last January. The incident should be investigated so the public will know whether police officers continue to be involved in that type of activity, Leggett said.

National Security

However unwillingly, the federal government has been forced into setting up a royal commission inquiry into possible unauthorized and illegal operations of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. It comes not a day too soon. For some years the force has been tainted by numerous accusations of wrongdoing by a few in its midst.

Usually these were investigated by in-house committees, according to the quasi-military lines of discipline in the RCMP. The royal commission is to be chaired by a fiercely independent Alberta judge and two lawyers from Montreal and Toronto, a combination of outsiders that probably will make this the most objective and impartial of any investigation of the Mounties.

That is, if it ignores the order in its terms of reference (set by the federal cabinet) that the inquiry go "in camera in all matters relating to national security and in all other matters where the commissioners deem it desirable in the public interest or in the interest of the privacy of individuals involved in specific cases."

National security is a blanket that can be stretched to cover an enormous number of embarrassments, blemishes, mistakes and fumbles by government. The Trudeau government's tenacious resistance of meaningful freedom of information laws and its past record at invoking the magic words on frequent occasions will make most Canadians distrust the royal commission, until it proves otherwise.

Can the government be so obtuse as to ignore the parallel example of our friends to the south? National security was the catch-all rationale invoked by Richard Nixon for refusing to make public information about all kinds of criminal acts by the executive branch of government that had little, if anything, to do with the security of the nation.

The RCMP royal commission's terms of reference appear to be wide enough to allow it to investigate almost anything, and the government has said that various cabinet ministers are ready and willing to cooperate. But when the crunch comes, as it must sometime in its work, the commission must not hesitate to be resolute and uncompromising in getting to the bottom of the rot in the RCMP wherever it leads.

Information, Please

Politicians, once they reach the seat of power, can produce an amazing number of reasons why a Freedom of Information Act isn't needed and wouldn't work. They talk about information that would wrongly injure innocent people, and information that would harm national security, and information that would break down competition in the business community. And, of course, the implication is always that the government already makes available all the information to the public that it ought to have.

The public, or any member of it who has ever tried to learn any information from the government, knows that this is nonsense. The government tells the public only information it believes will be advantageous to it politically, or at least not harm it.

Sometimes, it seems, it won't even tell the public that.

Take, for example, the case raised this week in the legislature by Liberal leader Gordon Gibson. Gibson wanted to find out a most innocuous fact — the number of civil servants working for the government. Normally, this information is published in the annual report of the Public Service Commission, but this year it wasn't. When Gibson's office asked the question of the commission, the explanation was that the figure was now partly the responsibility of the new Government Employees Relations Bureau (GERB).

GERB was asked the question; it sent Gibson to someone else for the answer. The buck was passed several times, and finally came to rest in the office of a senior civil servant in the finance ministry. Unable to pass the question on any further, he wrote Gibson a note, saying that such information could only be obtained by asking the minister on the floor of the legislature. Gibson did, and someday soon Wolfe is going to tell him just how many civil servants there are in B.C.

It's a little harder, however, for ordinary citizens who don't meet the cabinet ministers every day on the floor of the legislature.

Now really, is knowledge of the number of public servants going to harm innocent citizens? Is it going to break down competition in the business community? Is it going to hurt security of any sort? For that matter is it going to hurt the government politically? It seems unlikely.

Canada and B.C. both need freedom of information laws.

PETER HADEKEL

Honeymoon for Levesque

QUEBEC CITY — If popularity with the public is any measure, Rene Levesque's first seven months as premier of Quebec have been a success.

In fact, Levesque is probably the best thing the Parti Quebecois government has going for it right now.

At a time when the PQ is dragging its feet on many of the "good government" commitments it made to the Quebec electorate last November, Levesque continues to command widespread respect and popularity across Quebec. Opinion polls have shown that he runs neck-and-neck with Prime Minister Trudeau as far as personal popularity is concerned. And the warm reception he gets at most of his public appearances reinforces the impression that Quebecois feel a sense of pride with Levesque at the helm.

The impression is enhanced by Levesque's ability to identify with the problems of the little guy. He is able to relate well to the working man and to leave the impression that he cares about creating a just and humane society.

Even in anglophone circles it's not unusual to hear terms like "honest", "sincere", or a "democrat" applied to Levesque, despite the differing political persuasions of English Quebecers.

A Democrat

A good example of this occurred this spring after the government released its white paper on language. Levesque addressed a wary group of 1,500 members of Montreal's Jewish community who expressed real concern about their linguistic and cultural future in Quebec. By the end of his speech, Levesque had them standing and cheering with his commitment that minority groups would be respected in Quebec.

The fact that the PQ government has disappointed the expectations of thousands who voted for it last November hasn't caught up with Levesque so far.

While farmers grumble about broken promises for agricultural reform and small industries complain the government hasn't done as much as it promised to help them, their criticisms are usually aimed at individual cabinet ministers rather than the premier.

When opponents of the government's language charter start hurling abuse, it is always directed at the bill's sponsor, Dr. Camille Laurin, rather than at Levesque. Levesque has given wide rein to his ministers over the last seven months as if to test their capabilities. One result has been that cabinet ministers have been contradicting each other left and right.

The contradictions have been most frequent over matters such as industrial development and economic policies, but have extended as far as Quebec's treatment of francophone minorities in other provinces and the handling of the referendum on independence.

Not one of Levesque's ministers has had previous cabinet experience and despite their impressive array of academic credentials, they are learning by making mistakes.

One man who thinks it's time for Levesque to pull the reins on his cabinet is Rodrigue Biron, leader of the Union Nationale. "The premier has shown a promise that his ministers have," says Biron.

"In my own dealings with Levesque I have found him very flexible, but I wonder now whether he is able to control his more radical ministers."

Biron is expressing a partisan view of

more popular than ever

course, and evidence seems to be that Levesque is still assessing his troops before proceeding with a major cabinet shuffle in six months time.

Anyone who attended the Parti Quebecois biennial convention held in Montreal in May had to be impressed by Levesque's firm control over the party and the adoration his supporters felt for him. He was able to convince 1,800 party delegates that "the constraints of power" would not permit the government to implement much of the PQ's wide-ranging social and economic program.

Then, when the convention delegates voted in favor of abortion-on-demand, Levesque told them flatly he would not be bound by their resolution. He was cheered by almost everybody in the hall. As one delegate put it: "That speech took a hell of a lot of guts."

Any list of Levesque's successes as premier has to include his performance in the National Assembly where he has scuttled opposition arguments as if he were flicking crumbs off a table. There is clearly no opposition MLA to match Levesque's skill in debating or in turning a point to political advantage.

As a former broadcaster and newspaper columnist, Levesque knows the inner workings of the news media and uses the press to his advantage. His handling of the French-language press in particular has been so effective that he has been able to command maximum coverage for himself at his weekly news conferences.

With the ever-present cigarette between his fingers and his hands slicing through the air to make a point, Levesque pours out a torrent of words to reporters each week. Sometimes, his three minute sentences and complicated syntax make it seem as if he is saying something when he really hasn't said anything.

Levesque is more serene and moderate now than in the lean years when he built up the Parti Quebecois and struggled unsuccessfully to get himself elected to the National Assembly.

Flexibility

Clad in conservative suits, he now works 16 hours a day keeping up with the heavy responsibilities of running the province. He still fires occasional salvos at his political opponents, accusing federal politicians of acting like "agents provocateurs" towards Quebec and English media of running a propaganda war against his government.

But he has shown moderation and flexibility in bringing business and labor together for the first time to discuss economic priorities.

He has also acted more moderately on the language question than his cabinet colleagues. Levesque has yet to put in an appearance at the public hearings on Bill 1 and has hinted that the necessity of language legislation "humiliates" him.

Levesque has made some slip-ups too. His January speech to American financiers in New York was a failure and he made it worse by trying to pin the blame on a "fifth column" of Canadian businessmen whom he accused of sabotaging reaction to his speech.

Quebec's worsening economic picture has sparked criticism of Levesque's economic leadership.

to the point EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

WINNIPEG, July 3 — It is a biennial struggle the federal New Democratic Party engages in — the struggle to reconcile idealism with realism, dogmatic socialism with left-wing populism. It is a struggle that is never entirely successful; the poles are too far apart to admit real compromise.

One side or the other — the realists or the idealists — has to win, at least for the moment, and at the Canada Day weekend conference here, the victory definitely went to the realists, under the banner of party leader Ed Broadbent.

Before the four-day convention even began, Broadbent had chosen the one issue he felt he had to win — the issue of national unity. He won it with an ease and a strength that surprised even his own supporters.

Broadbent took his national unity position first to meetings of the federal council (the party's governing body) the week before the convention. It emphasized four main points: first, the party strongly believes in a united Canada; second, it welcomes Quebec "nationalism" in terms of language and culture and believes that nationalism can be realized within Canada; third, it is convinced the real issues of national unity are not constitutional or cultural but economic; and fourth (and this is perhaps the most controversial aspect) that the provinces should not gain more powers, that what Canada needs is a strong central government to assume leadership to improve the lives of all Canadians, although program administration could be decentralized.

The position as a whole became known as the "Third Option" or "Positive Option." Discussion of the position dominated debate both at the council and in the backrooms at the beginning of the convention. Although it was generally accepted, there was a feeling that it was unrealistic to ignore altogether the need for constitutional reform, and some tactful working changes were made to allow for future reform while still emphasizing the centralist position.

Broadbent outlined the position in detail in his keynote speech to the delegates, and they responded with loud applause. However, a small group organized itself into a loose caucus to oppose the position. This group proved to be the extreme left-wing edge of the NDP (most of them from B.C. and Alberta), and the point they opposed in the Third Option was the first one — that Canada should remain united.

As soon as Broadbent sat down, they jumped to their feet to argue procedural points which they felt would give them a better chance to win the day, and won a majority vote on several key procedures. The Broadbent supporters began to worry about the radicals' strength.

"Never mind Quebec seceding; I'd entertain a motion right now to have B.C. secede from this party," muttered one Ontario delegate. Another key member of the party establishment worried that "these crazies will pass all these policies, and we'll be left to pick up the pieces."

But when the time came for the full debate on national unity, it was clear from the beginning that it was no contest. More than a dozen of the radicals argued their point that to be in favor of national unity was to take away the Quebecois' right to self-determination, but applause was scattered and weak. Broadbent, in contrast, received a standing ovation for an impassioned three-minute defence of his position. And when former leader David Lewis got up and gave an even more emotional speech along the same lines, the delegates stood and stamped their feet and clapped and cheered.

When the vote was taken the radicals could muster scarcely 50 supporters.

In a much closer vote, the realists also won the day on a highly controversial labor resolution which stated that striking workers should be eligible for unemployment insurance. The resolution (which clearly would have made a mockery of labor relations in Canada) was defeated 185 to 168.

The party establishment, which was in charge of the agenda, also managed to arrange priorities in such a way that many other resolutions that would have been difficult to deal with never reached the floor. The question of abortion, which splits the NDP badly, was one; legalization of marijuana was another.

The establishment — which has always been the realist side of the party — also handily won virtually every elected position in the party hierarchy. In fact, there was far more difficulty in deciding on candidates within the establishment (particularly for the position of president) than there was in having those candidates, once nominated, defeat their radical opponents.

But one of the secrets of party conventions is never to let the losers lose too badly, at least not so badly that they will leave the party in disgust. So, a few resolutions were passed that the dogmatic socialists were happy with — one, for example, that would give homosexuals vast numbers of rights they have now, and others calling for greater government involvement in such matters as housing and energy.

Also, the establishment agreed to run on its slate a few candidates that were from the least dogmatic of the dogmatic socialists, the most realistic of the idealists. These candidates, of course, won easily and will be in a position to have a little say in party policy for the next two years.

That meant that the idealists, the losers, probably will stay around the NDP, continuing to work to try to change the party from inside. Even more important, from the party's point of view, they will remain committed enough to join with the rest of the NDP on the hustings at the next federal election. — B.McL.

Latin Mass

A newspaper like yours must pride itself on the accuracy of its news reports, and in my experience this is generally the case with the Victoria Times.

On June 29, however, you did yourselves a disservice by printing verbatim the UPI dispatch from Econe, Switzerland, about so-called Roman Catholic Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre's illegal ordination of 14 new priests and 22 subdeacons (whatever they are).

The inaccuracy occurred in the closing paragraph: the dispatch cited a Vatican "ban on saying Mass in Latin and a requirement that priests face the congregation when saying Mass." Let me say categorically — there is no such ban. Mass is said daily in Latin throughout the world, including such cities as Rome itself and London, England. In fact, if I am not mistaken, our own Victoria Franciscans on Joan Crescent say at least one public Latin Mass a week with the approval of their superiors and, I presume, of Bishop Remi De Roo.

Even the outdated Tridentine Latin rite is permitted in such countries as England. No doubt Marcel Lefebvre could get permission to say it too, his favorite form of Mass, if only he would not defy the authority of his spiritual leader, Pope Paul, of whose original Our Lord himself said, when Peter was inspired to say of Him "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God." "You are Peter, the rock on which I will build my Church." (Mk. 16: 18, 19).

As for facing the people, even our own Father MacNamara, pastor of Queen of Peace parish, doesn't do that when he says Mass. — Robin Terry, 524 Dallas Road.

Two Lives

I find it not at all surprising that Planned Parenthood "educator" Pearl Denny finds the publication of the pro-life pamphlet abhorrent. There is nothing more advantageous to the perpetuation of pro-abortion fallacies than a populace which is ignorant of the ugly realities of abortion.

It is a fact that in the United States most of the major victories for the pro-abortionists were made before educational pro-life and right-to-life groups were formed. A citizenry which knows about the facts of abortion will not be so gullible to swallow the slogans about a "woman's right to her own body" and a "woman's right to choose." At least they will realize there are two lives involved in every abortion.

In its early years of existence Planned Parenthood limited itself to contraception and specifically opposed abortion. Today Planned Parenthood is probably the most aggressive and powerful force in the world pushing for free abortion-on-demand for any woman, anywhere, for almost any reason at all. They are now dedicated to helping mothers find physicians who will kill the life of a baby after it has begun.

Interestingly, there is a trend towards blurring this distinction between abortion and contraceptive birth control, since certain contraceptives can also have an abortifacient function, and since the development of the "morning after" pill.

Today, abortion has become an integral part of the women's movement. Few will argue that in many areas of the world women have suffered inhuman hardships and indignities at the hands of chauvinistic males. It is an interesting fact that by an 1876 enactment of British law, women were not legally persons. "Women" the law declared "are persons in matters of pains and penalties, but are not persons in matters of rights and privileges." Such male-inspired statutes made a revolt by women inevitable. However, by incorporating abortion into their demands, are women not imposing on the unborn the same denial of human dignity under which they have struggled for so many years?

The most insidious aspect of the women's abortion-on-demand platform is the very acceptable sound of their rhetoric. Rarely do they advocate abortion as such but instead plead for the "freedom of choice" and the "right of a woman to her own body." "How," they ask, "can we impose our moral values on other women?"

How desperately we need to sharpen our thinking to be critical of this honey-coated terminology. "Freedom of choice" is in fact the freedom to choose to dispose of a child not yet born. The "right to control her body" is really licence to destroy another person's body. The question we must ask ourselves is, "How can we allow women to fatally impose their brand of morality on the innocent unborn?"

The great cry of women's liberation in the sixties was that women were tired of being treated as sexual objects. In actual fact, women are never so thoughtlessly exploited as when abortion is easy. It is an interesting fact that the Playboy Foundation financed all legal research for the U.S. Supreme Court appeal of the abortion laws. It is also a fact that in a national survey conducted by an American pro-abortion group, it was not, as expected, the poor, underprivileged, colored women who most favoured abortion, but rather the middle to upper class white middle-aged males. — David Newberry, 249 Wildwood.

'Monarchy Not For Us'

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Toronto Star

OTTAWA — The celebrations in Britain of the Queen's silver jubilee are underlining once again the ambiguous situation of the crown in Canada.

To most Canadians, the monarchy seems to have sentimental but no practical value.

We enjoy watching the glittering ceremonies in London. When we are questioned by the CBC's pollsters, we say we want the monarchy to continue but we are not sure what role if any it plays in our political process.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau probably reflects the majority attitude quite well when he suggests that the future of the monarchy is not a big issue and not worth fighting about.

But when we are facing a constitutional crisis, can we really afford to be so ambiguous about one of our principal institutions? If we are going to reform the constitution to prevent the break-up of the country, should we not be more decisive in our opinions about the role of the crown?

The crown after all is a symbol for certain traditions and values, and symbols are important in political debates.

More than a century ago in Britain, Walter Bagehot, in his famous book, The English Constitution, pointed out that the monarchy and the attendant aristocracy were a sort of circus to distract the common people while the actual business of government was carried on by the middle class in Parliament.

Incidentally, Bagehot also thought that no such camouflage would be necessary in British North America where educated and independent free men would be capable of ruling themselves. But let that pass.

The respected and conservative British weekly, The Economist, noted recently that times have changed and that instead of providing a screen for efficient parliamentary government, the monarchy now distracts attention from inefficiency.

In other words, when Britons can turn out by the hundreds of thousands to cheer the Queen and revel in pomp and circumstance recalling the great days of empire, they can escape the reality that their system of government is not working very well, and that one result is the decline of real power and prestige.

In Canada, the Queen is even more of a fairy tale figurehead than she is in Britain. She plays almost no role in government and even her representative, the Governor-General, is sinking from public sight, largely ignored by the media and unknown to the public.

So why bother with the monarchy? Why not simply let it wither away? Because it is a reminder of our "Englishness" at a time when we are trying to persuade French Canadians that this is their land as much as ours. And because it tends to freeze our system of government when we should be looking carefully at alternative models.

It is a simple fact that the crown is not as popular in Quebec as it is in other parts of Canada. French Canadians are not generally hostile to the Queen, but they don't have the same sentimental ties to London and the Commonwealth as do many English Canadians. Why should they have?

If we want to persuade French Canadians that we are ready to make a new start on confederation, to create institutions reflecting national Canadian rather than English ideas and attitudes, nothing would be more convincing than a willingness to abolish the monarchy.

The monarchy and the associated traditions are part of our system of parliamentary government. Even to consider major changes in the system is to raise questions about the role of the monarchy. So that until we are prepared to discuss the monarchy in a serious way, it is hard to talk about fundamental reform of our institutions, although many of our parliamentarians are now prepared to concede the need for change.

To criticize the institution of monarchy by pointing out that it is an archaic device which probably does more harm than good is not, of course, to attack the Queen or her family. They are probably the splendid people they are made out to be by their courtiers and publicists — although history suggests monarchs are not always the paragons of virtue and service they appear to be while on the throne. Some monarchs much loved and admired by the innocent public have turned out to be thoroughly unpleasant people.

But the question is not whether we like and admire the Queen and her family but whether the institution of monarchy is a help or hindrance in keeping Canada united and reasonably well governed. In my opinion, it is hindrance, a divisive and distracting reminder of bygone days.

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

A blessed event is about to take place — it may have already happened — out on West Saanich Road. In many ways this blessed event is no different from thousands of similar events taking place on Vancouver Island at this time of year, but in one respect it is different. As the arrival into this world of a family of Bullock's Orioles, this event may be only the seventh or eighth of its kind ever to take place on Vancouver Island.

Before the purists nail me to the cross for using the name Bullock's, let me make it perfectly clear that, according to a recent edit from the Ivory towers of birddom, Bullock's Oriole — formerly a full-blooded species of its own — has now been relegated to a subspecies, along with its eastern counterpart the Baltimore Oriole, and both are henceforth to be known as Northern Orioles.

Having cleared up that point, and in the full knowledge that a Bullock's Oriole will always be a Bullock's Oriole in the eyes of most birdwatchers, let me continue my expose of the goings-on up on West Saanich Road. But first a little background.

Bullock's Orioles are relative newcomers to Vancouver Island's bird fauna. They began showing up occasionally late in the 60's; before that the best they could muster was an accidental straggler. Even on the mainland — around Vancouver — they were rare. Only in the Interior — the Okanagan and Kootenays — were they regular summer residents.

But in the early 70's things began to change. First Bullock's Orioles became almost regular spring migrants through these parts, usually leaving their calling cards around the 24th of May. Then, in 1976, the first nest was reported — just north of Courtenay — along with the fact they'd been nesting there for four years.

In the same year they were also found nesting at Cadboro Bay and Central Saanich. They're back at Cadboro Bay again this year as well as at their new outpost on West Saanich Road.

Alaska Pipeline Questioned

By WALLACE TURNER

ANCHORAGE — Between now and late July the 800 steel miles of the Alaska pipeline will be filled with nine million barrels of oil, putting into operation a major new petroleum supply system.

But even as the oil began entering the pipeline last month, a number of questions were being raised about the enormous project's past and its future. Has the pipeline turned out to be as necessary as originally predicted? Why did it cost more than expected? Where will the oil be delivered and at what cost? What possible adverse effects on the environment will the pipeline have? How will Alaska itself benefit?

By and large, the predictions about the necessity of the line proved to be correct. The pipeline will bring about 1.2 million barrels of petroleum a day to the tanker loading docks at Valdez, the equivalent of about 7 per cent of America's daily consumption and about 15 per cent of its foreign oil imports.

The project certainly cost more than predicted. At the beginning, there was a rough estimate of $900 million. Halfway through the project, the estimate had grown to $3 to $4 billion. By autumn of 1974, after the first year of construction activity north of the Yukon River, a firm estimate of $5.89 billion was made. Now the cost is calculated at $7.7 billion.

Critics of Alyeska, the pipeline company, assert that the cost went up because of poor management; the company maintains that added environmental protection measures and inflation caused the cost overrun. Critics contend that the company should not be allowed to charge higher rates to recover money that was wasted.

The question of delivery has become pressing because such a flood of oil will pour out of the 4-foot wide pipeline that tankers must constantly haul it away to refineries. (In 1973, when the pipeline right of way bill was being debated in Congress, the oil companies spurned suggestions that the line be built across Canada to the upper Midwest, arguing that the only practical terminus was a salt water tanker port.) But one of the leading purchasers of the oil, the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, finds the market on the West Coast glutted and has no cheap way to move it east.

The company had planned to build a pipeline from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland, Tex., where it would connect with the midcontinent pipeline system. However, the California State Air Resources Board objected to the pollution that would be created by the unloading of 290 tankers a year in the already heavily contaminated atmosphere of the Los Angeles Basin. Discussions are continuing, but even if a pipeline permit is granted, it will take 18 months to put it into operation, during which time the company would have to dispose of 350 million barrels of oil.

As production falls in California and demand rises, the Western market may come to absorb all of the Alaskan oil. But the company is not able to wait. It may take the costly alternative of hauling the oil to the East Coast through the Panama Canal, adding 1.25 to the price of a barrel.

The pipeline sponsors might also try to persuade the Carter administration and Congress that exporting the oil to Japan would be a more satisfactory temporary expedient until the West Coast needs the oil. Congress wrote a prohibition on exports into the Alaska Pipeline Authorization Act, and trying to make a case now for foreign sales might aggravate suspicions that the companies are more devoted to profits than providing for U.S. energy needs.

The environmental hazards of the pipeline will begin to become clear in the next few weeks as the oil travels to Valdez. If the line has serious defects — some environmentalists have warned of large scale leakage — they will probably show up then. One possible defect could result from expansion. Empty, the line's temperature is 16 degrees Fahrenheit, but the oil comes out of the ground hot and enters the line at 140

Abortions for Rich

By MARK FRANKLAND

WASHINGTON — America's well organized anti-abortion lobby has just won three victories which could very well result in abortions here becoming the privilege of women who can afford to pay for private medical care.

Women who must depend on Medicaid — the government-financed free medical service for the poor — may no longer be able to get abortion, unless their health is obviously threatened.

The most important of the victories for the "right to life" forces, as the anti-abortionists call themselves, was a Supreme Court decision last month that states and cities may refuse to spend public money on abortions that are not considered to be medically necessary.

This was preceded by a vote in the House of Representatives to bar the use of Medicaid money for abortions of any sort. A Senate committee subsequently voted similarly, though making some exceptions, for example cases where a mother's life was threatened.

These votes and the divided Supreme Court decision, in which three judges argued vehemently against the majority ruling, reflect the sharp division in the country over abortion. On the one side there is the right to life campaign, basing itself squarely on the religious and/or moral argument that abortion is murder.

On the other there are the traditional liberals who see the problem in social and economic terms as well as moral ones. The argument has been emotional on both sides. In the House of Representatives debate, a conservative, anti-abortion Congressman asked rhetorically: "What sort of horrible cruelty is it that rips 1,100,000 unborn children from their mothers' wombs... what kind of cruelty is it that shows no concern for 1,100,000 murders (i.e. abortions) in the United States last year, 300,000 of them conducted at federal taxpayers' expense?"

On the other side, Millicent Fenwick, an aristocratic Republican Congresswoman from New Jersey, asked just as emotionally whether anyone thought it was possible to stop abortions by votes of Congress. Instead, she said: "We send people to abortion mills. We all know it... The victims turn up in the hospitals dying from infection or haemorrhage... Maybe until one has talked to a poor woman in trouble it is impossible to understand."

One-third of all the abortions in the U.S. last year were had by teenagers. Family planning experts say that less than one out of every three pregnant American teenagers actually wants to have her baby.

Since 1973, when the Supreme Court ruled that it was unconstitutional for a State to declare abortion a crime, poor teenagers or poor older women have had no trouble in getting abortions, even if their reason was that they had a broken home or just could not afford the child.

In the Washington area it costs between $350 and $500 to get an abortion from a private doctor or hospital and so, as one Congressman argued, "It does not require a great deal of imagination to see that poor women will either be forced to carry their pregnancy to term, or to obtain an illegal or self-induced abortion."

The supporters of abortion are gloomy about their chances of winning back the ground they have just lost in Congress. In fact, Congress first voted a limitation on using Medicaid funds for abortion last year, but a federal judge in New York at once put a stay on its enforcement.

The anti-abortion forces, goaded by the Supreme Court decision, were active and noisy hecklers throughout last year's presidential election, demanding no less than a constitutional amendment that would declare abortion illegal.

President Carter, as a candidate, took a cautious stand, saying he was personally against abortion but that he did not support a constitutional amendment to overturn the Supreme Court decision.

But Joseph Califano, the man Carter appointed to run the Health, Education and Welfare Department that administers Medicaid, has said that he opposes using federal funds for abortions, except where the mother's life is in danger.

The fact is that the well-knit and emotionally powered Right to Life campaign has coincided with a perceptible shift towards conservatism in American politics. What one sees all around is that the liberal argument that law and government should be used to counter social, racial and economic inequalities is, for a number of reasons, increasingly challenged.

The difficulty of reconciling the two views was dramatically plain in the majority and minority opinions of the Supreme Court. The majority took an essentially legal view, arguing that the decision put "no obstacles" to a pregnant woman's search for abortion. "An indigent woman" could go "to private sources for the services she desires."

Justice Harry Blackmun, one of the three dissenters, responded bitterly: "I find that disingenuous and alarming, almost reminiscent of 'let them eat cake'... There is another world out there, the existence of which the court, I suspect, either chooses to ignore or fears to recognize. And so the cancer of poverty will continue to grow."

A Blessed Event For the Orioles row of Lombardy poplars on that lot line, we have our newest record for Bullock's Oriole.

The way Eldon Staley tells it, the birds showed up early in June. He remembers seeing the two of them pecking at a line of netting he had out for peas; they seemed to be looking for string for the bag-like nest.

Remembering from his youth in Ontario how partial Baltimore Orioles had been to horsehair for their nests, Eldon decided to give this pair a hand. Since horsehair is a comparatively rare commodity in these parts, despite the recent upsurge in interest in horses, Eldon offered the orioles the next best thing — fine black, nylon line.

Cutting the line into usable lengths, Eldon kept a liberal supply of his pseudo horsehair available near the pea netting for several days. The birds accepted his offering without hesitation, so much so that within a week a blackish structure had taken shape about 40 feet up in one of the poplars and the orioles had settled in.

For awhile the beautiful flaming orange and jet-black male made himself obvious, proclaiming his landed status with rich, clear whistled notes, but when I dropped in on the family late in June he'd settled down to the chores of patrolling his land and relieving his mate for short periods of her responsibilities of incubation.

By now the young have probably hatched and both parents are heavily involved in tending to their needs, which will mean that except for their harsh communication notes, little else will be heard from the orioles for this year. And, despite the bright colours of the adults, they'll remain almost as invisible as a blackbird in a coal heap.

But there's a way to get them out where they can be seen.

From my experience with Baltimore Orioles in Manitoba, they're suckers for oranges. There's no reason to believe Bullock's Orioles aren't the same. So, my advice to The Staleys and the Crowthers is to get in a supply of oranges and each day cut one in half and put both halves out in some prominent place and await developments.

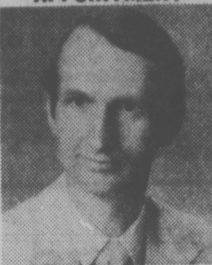

Developments, this year, should be a good show of orioles and next year, more oriole blessed events.

Canadian Fur-Maker Gets Big Chance in New York

MONTREAL (CP) — A leading Canadian fur manufacturer is hoping to win a

its own fur salon in Bonwit

Teller, the fashionable Fifth Avenue department store.

D. H. Grosvenor Inc. has already become the first Canadian fur manufacturer to market its products in Canada under its own label rather

Robert Landau, company

president, says the firm now

York.

The opening, scheduled for September, is the second of its kind for the Montreal company. Two years ago, Grosvenor was given full responsibility for running the fur department

and best-known department

Landau says the New York

move is a rare opportunity for a furrier to operate a salon in a major U.S. store. He hopes sales will reach $2 million at the Bonwit Teller outlet in 1977 and increase to as much as $5 million annually by 1979.

For the opening, the department will be stocked with inventory with a retail value of $2 million, Landau said in a recent interview. Price tags on the merchandise will start from $2,000 and go up to $75,000 for a long coat of Russian lynx.

During one week in October, the department store has agreed to allot its eight display windows on Fifth Avenue to Grosvenor's fur store, something that Landau says is almost unheard of.

At the same time, the fur manufacturer is planning two private showings for a total audience of 400 celebrities which, Landau says, will be "the social event of the season" in New York.

The show, expected to cost

$30,000, will be held in Regine's a chic supper-club and disco-bar. About 200 items will be shown, worn by 25 models from Montreal.

Conrad Cain, Bonwit's vice-president of sales promotion, says Grosvenor was offered the concession because "Grosvenor and Canada are both names synonymous with

A show presented by the further last year was "very successful," Cain said in a telephone interview from New York.

The Montreal company will operate on a concession basis, which means it will pay Bonwit's a percentage of sales, and will pay display costs and staff salaries. Grosvenor will retain ownership of unsold merchandise.

The Montreal company will operate half the fur department and Bonwit's the other half. The salon totals 2,000 feet of selling space and 2,500 feet of office and stockroom area.

Landau says the London venture has been a huge success for the company. Sales at Harrod's were $3 million in 1975, the first year of operation, and will reach $5 million this year, he said.

Grosvenor, with total sales for 1977 projected between $22 million and $24 million, has offices in several West European countries and in Japan and the U.S. in recent years has put more emphasis on foreign markets, and has "many hundreds" of foreign customers, Landau says.

"Canada can't support the type of garments we make in the quantities we make them," observes Landau, 37, who was born in England and moved here 17 years ago.

"We are the top of the

The company's sales figures are rising sharply and the furrier is enlarging its Montreal premises. Landau says Grosvenor, which employs about 200 here, is the largest fur manufacturer in North America as measured in dollar figures.

The company expects its products to grace the covers of 200 consumer and trade publications this year, and the further will spend about $1 million for advertising and promotion.

And later this year, Eaton's

biggest fur exhibit ever seen in Canada "and perhaps

North America," using Grosvenor garments only. The presentation will last for a month

Illegal Expense Money Charge

Three Social Credit MLAs unlawfully received expense money while serving on a government committee last year, opposition members charged Friday.

But at least one of those MLAs, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam

Bawlf, said later he did not file for or receive any expense money at all, although he would have if he'd thought of it.

NDP MLA Alex Macdonald (Vancouver East) said the three — Bawlf, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt and Socred MLA George Derster (Oquillam) — contravened a section of the Constitution Act which says that MLAs can receive no money from the government, except for their regular stipend or money from a committee sanctioned by the legislature.

The three were part of a 12-member committee set up to study housing problems in B.C. The committee, which became known as the Bawlf committee, was set up by the government with no opposition representation.

Macdonald said that because the committee was not sanctioned, the government members were not entitled to expense money.

The rest of the committee was comprised of municipal representatives.

Bob Skelly (NDP-Alberni) said the three should be disqualified from holding their seats because they received the expense money.

The issue was raised during debate in legislature on the spending estimates of Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis, sponsor of the committee.

Curtis would say only that the MLAs received no per diem compensation, only expense money.

But Bawlf said later he did not file for any expenses.

"I spend several hundred dollars out of my own pocket," Bawlf said.

"I was too busy trying to prepare a useful report to be concerned about it," he said.

"But if I had thought about it, I might have done so."

Hewitt and Kerster could not be reached for comment.

SOME HOT SPOTS IN B.C. FORESTS

The B.C. forest fire hazard is low because of cool wet weather during the past week but there are isolated hot spots near Barriere, Lillooet and Cranbrook, the forests ministry reported Friday.

The ministry said 98 new fires were reported this week, with 63 fires still burning. Flying tankers dropped seventy-four tons of fire retardant on the fires and mop-up operations continue.

This season, 694 fires burning 6,256 acres have been reported, compared to 490 fires burning 99,644 acres for the same period last year. Fire-fighting costs this year are estimated at $579,500 compared with $1.53 million at this time last year.

Question Time Abused—Wallace

The daily 15-minute question period in the legislature is being abused so much it is rapidly becoming a farce, Conservative leader Scott Wallace said Friday.

Wallace said in order to debate the problem he has introduced a motion calling for the question period to be doubled to 30 minutes, or to any longer period of time which the house considers appropriate.

He said a lengthening of the question period wouldn't necessarily solve the problem, but it would at least rectify long-winded answers by cabinet ministers and unnecessary interruptions by NDP MLAs.

Wallace said speaker Ed Smith is incompetent and totally inadequate in his ability to ensure a proper flow of questions and answers during the period, and debate of the motion would allow for discussion of Smith's ability.

He also said that general conduct in the house has deteriorated lately, and that could be debated too.

LANG'S FRENCH CHEERED IN COMMONS

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs listened in apparent fascination Friday while Transport Minister Otto Lang delivered part of a statement in French in the Commons.

At the end of it all Liberals applauded and Opposition Leader Joe Clark, a fellow westerner and also speaking in French, congratulated the minister.

Lang has been known to have knowledge of French but, apparently embarrassed by his accent, seldom uses it and, up to today, not in the Commons.

But he delivered about one-third of his remarks on the use of French in Quebec airports in that language.

Clark, who frequently speaks a heavily-accented French, said Lang's remarks show that the official language policy of Canada applies in Saskatchewan and High River, Alta., the latter being Clark's home town.

B.C. to Open Music Centre

A branch of the Canadian Music Centre will begin operations in Vancouver this fall with the opening scheduled for mid-October.

The centre is being funded and supported by the city of Vancouver, B.C. Cultural Fund, Vancouver and Leon and Thea Koerner Foundations, the B.C. Post-Secondary Music Association and Canada Council.

Establishment of this branch, to be known as Canadian Music West, is the direct result of two years of work by a committee of concerned B.C. musicians. Universities, colleges, orchestras, music groups and media are represented among the directors. Included are Bruce More of the University of Victoria, and on the search committee for a regional manager, Rudolf Komarov, new chairman of UVic music department.

The centre is a non-governmental, non-profit organization dedicated to the promotion and dissemination of music by serious Canadian composers.

Among its services will be a free lending library of scores, performance material, listening library of tapes of Canadian music, catalogues of Canadian music, information on Canadian orchestras, centres of music learning, competitions, and cultural activities.

The regional manager will be expected to maintain close contacts with B.C. composers and move about the province making the centre known to teachers, performers, media people and critics, as well as being responsible for organization and administration of the centre. Proposed salary is $17,500.

Persons interested in applying for the position should do so, with a brief summary of their background, to Dr. Allen Clingman, 3233 Quesset Drive, Vancouver, V6S 1Z7.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Three men facing three charges in connection with the taking of a luxury cabin cruiser Thursday morning were remanded one week for election of trial method.

William Anthony Thistle, 25, of 2501 Cook; Timothy Arthur Soutiere, 24, of 1189 Roslyn, and Harvey Mark McLeod, 24, of 2320 Windsor, appeared before Judge Fred Green in Victoria provincial court Friday charged with breaking and entering and two counts of theft over $200.

They were charged with breaking into the 60-foot Mahalo-Nui, which was moored at the Oak Bay Marina. The theft charges involve the boat and a rubber Zodiac vessel.

Soutiere and McLeod were released until their next appearance in court but Thistle was remanded in custody until Monday, when a bail hearing is expected to be launched.

Ken and Kevin Alexander, two of three brothers from Victoria playing in the Western Lacrosse Association with Nanaimo Timbermen, were charged with making false claims for unemployment insurance benefits. Ken, 30, of Pedder Bay Road, is charged with 15 counts, totalling $3,690, and Kevin, 21, of 726 Canterbury Road, is charged with seven counts amounting to $1,476.

Neither was in court Friday when charges were read but lawyer Roger Cardinal, appearing as their agent, entered pleas of not guilty for both and trials were set for Oct. 11.

Hugh Seymour Archbold, 18, charged with robbery with threats of violence in connection with the $1,905 holdup of the Bank of Nova Scotia at 3055 Shelbourne on June 14, had a preliminary hearing date of Aug. 5 set on that charge.

Archbold, who is still in custody because his bail has not been perfected, is also charged with possession of a controlled drug for the purpose of trafficking and the preliminary hearing on that charge has been set for Aug. 9.

Green ordered a pre-sentence report for a 24-year-old man who pleaded guilty to assaults causing bodily harm in which jaws were broken.

Christopher Robert Bell, of 2884 Dowler Place, pleaded guilty to the July 1 assaults and crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court the charges involved a 76-year-old man who suffered other injuries as well as a broken jaw and was near death in hospital on two occasions, and Bell's former common-law wife, Helen Charleson, of 2667 Blanshard.

Bell will be sentenced July 19 by Green, who agreed with Lang that a psychiatric examination and report might also be in order.

Panhandlers Would Need Permit

City council is considering a new street collections bylaw — and it has nothing to do with garbage pick-up.

Members of council's finance committee feel the city should have a bylaw requiring any organization soliciting funds on the street to have a permit.

The permits will be free, as long as applicants are willing to fill out a three-page detailed questionnaire.

All groups from the firemen, Salvation Army, school tag day organizations to Hare Krishna and panhandlers would be required to have a permit if the law goes into effect.

The bylaw was introduced because "several persons have been abusing the privilege of collecting money in the city streets, thereby creating a nuisance."

Fund drives have not been subject to city council approval.

Oddly enough, according to city manager Jim Bramley, street musicians would be exempt from the permits.

Bramley said the musicians simply take out their instruments and start to play and coincidentally happen to leave the instrument case open on the sidewalk in front of them.

The bylaw, however, defines soliciting as "any mode of conduct, whether or not the purpose of the gift is stated or implied by the person who receives or attempts to receive the money."

To get a permit, organizations would have to provide the full names, home addresses and occupations of all of its directors and officers; and include copies of the organization's financial statements and its constitution and bylaws, and name the firm which is to audit its accounts.

ANOTHER COVER-UP?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A maverick Republican on the house ethics committee says Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger knew South Korean agents were buying influence on Capitol Hill and took part in a coverup of the scandal.

Rep. Bruce Caputo, (Rep.-N.Y.) said Thursday he will ask the House panel to seek access to some of the ex-president's recorded conversations because proof of his allegations may lie in the Nixon White House tapes. "I personally believe that both former secretary of state Kissinger and former president Nixon knew about the Korean lobbying attempts but for a variety of reasons did not choose to act on that knowledge," Caputo said. He provided no evidence to support his charge. Caputo said the Ethics Committee had accumulated information that "makes it increasingly clear that top administration officials were aware of the influence-purchasing plan" and Nixon's tapes might show which congressmen were involved.

U.S. Glassware Suspect

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) says people should stop using McDonald's promotional glasses until tests show whether decals on the glassware pose a lead hazard. The FDA says those tests may be concluded during the weekend.

John Walden, assistant FDA commissioner for public affairs, said Friday night that the agency is trying to confirm Massachusetts tests that showed lead content up to 18 times what the state allows in the painted cartoon decals. Douglas Timberlake, a spokesman for McDonald's, said there is no evidence of lead content violations. He declined comment on the FDA's request that people temporarily refrain from using the glasses.

Lead paint is especially dangerous when ingested by children under the age of six. In Toronto, George Cohen, president of McDonald's of Canada, said none of the glasses have been distributed in Canada and that Canadian franchisees use only paper cups and plastic containers.

Another Laetrile Question

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Laetrile, the chemical that some believe can be a cancer cure, may be poisonous when taken with certain uncooked foods, says a scientist who tested the combination on dogs.

Six of 10 dogs died last week after being fed a combination of almonds and Laetrile, which is extracted from apricot pits, in an experiment. Dr. Jerry Lewis of the University of California at Davis said Friday the dogs died because of the cyanide released by the combination.

Three of the remaining dogs were put to sleep because they were comatose or paralyzed by the dose for several hours, Lewis said. The 10th dog recovered. A dog fed only almonds did not get sick, he added.

"This proves that Laetrile, when ingested with certain foods, would be toxic and very likely lethal to man," said Lewis, who heads the Davis medical school's studies of blood and tumors.

Lewis also spelled out his conclusions on the dangers of Laetrile in a paper published Friday in the California Medical Association's Western Journal of Medicine.

The article was written before the experiment on dogs, which Lewis described in an interview. He said the dogs were mongrels who were to have been killed at the pound.

'People Killer' Bomb Not New, Says Pentagon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "enhanced radiation" nuclear warhead — similar to the headline-making neutron bomb — has actually been part of the U.S. arsenal on other forms for years, according to Pentagon officials.

The officials pointed out Friday that in 1971, when James Schlesinger as head of the Atomic Energy Commission took his family to the blast side of a recent underground test to prove there was no hazard, the device exploded was an "enhanced radiation" warhead.

A spokesman for the Energy Research and Development Administration, successor agency to the AEC, contended there was no relation between the 1971 test and the present neutron warhead. But defence sources said while the 1971 blast was larger, it used "the same technology."

The 1971 test involved one of two warheads designed for an antiballistic missile rocket system intended to defend against Soviet strategic missiles. Officials said the technology of ABM warheads led to development of the "people killer" bombs which has produced a controversy in the Senate.

One ABM missile, the Sprint, used neutron radiation because it would sometimes have to be detonated over cities, where the blast and heat from a normal warhead would cause destruction on the ground as well as to the oncoming Soviet missile.

ANITA BRYANT CRUSADE SUED

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — A children's agency has sued Anita Bryant's anti-homosexual crusade, saying its use of the name "Save Our Children Inc." hurt the agency's fundraising efforts.

The agency, Save the Children Inc., based in Westport, filed suit in federal court in Miami on Friday. U.S. District Judge William Hoever said he will hear the case July 14.

The suit asks for a temporary restraining order and a permanent injunction against the use of the name "Save Our Children," which Miss Bryant incorporated in February.

Harold Littledale, the agency's public affairs co-ordinator, said former regular contributors have stopped donating.

Legionnaires' Bacteria Surface

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The bacterium responsible for Legionnaires' disease apparently has caused 19 cases of pneumonia since last August, the U.S. Centre for Disease Control (CDC) says.

The disease killed 29 persons at an American Legion convention in Philadelphia last year.

Six of the cases of sporadic pneumonia identified since August were fatal, the CDC said Friday.

Sixteen of the 19 pneumonia cases in 11 states since Aug. 1, 1976, were men aged 31 to 67 years old, the CDC said.

Researchers at the CDC and elsewhere still have not found the source of the bacterium.

Multiracial Gov't Talks Set for Natal

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A provincial official in South Africa's Natal province announced Friday that white, black and Indian leaders will meet later this month for unprecedented talks aimed at possible creation of a multiracial local government there.

Such a move, quietly under discussion for several months, would run counter to South Africa's long-established policies of white supremacy and racial separation.

Frank Martin, senior member of the provincial executive council, announced the meeting and said the agenda would be left open so black leaders would not commit themselves to anything simply by attending.

If preliminary agreement on objectives can be reached, full-scale talks would become possible, he said.

A 1970 government census said Natal, in eastern South Africa, had a population of 442,000 whites, 67,000 "coloureds," or persons of mixed race, 515,000 Indians and 1.1 million blacks.

Martin gave no details of what the provincial leadership is contemplating, but in a recent newspaper interview he said "our scheme" would recognize blacks as permanent residents of urban areas and would extend full civil rights to them.

"We would also like to see immediate self-government granted to all urban communities with multiracial metropolitan boards to co-ordinate services in the large urban areas," Martin said in the interview.

"In broad outline, what we envisage is a situation where the plural nature of our society is recognized and where there will be joint decision-making in matters of agreed common interest.

"We want to avoid the domination of one race group by another while all measures which are an affront to the dignity of people must be removed."

Unlike South Africa's three other provinces, dominated by Afrikaners descended from Dutch, French and English settlers, Natal's whites are mainly English-speaking South Africans and the province has a relatively high proportion of opposition members of parliament from the United party. Blacks now living in segregated townships on the fringes of South African's white urban areas are governed by white-run administration boards with blacks having only the power to advise on matters concerning their own communities.

Auto Price Parity Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Starting with the 1978 model year, the price in Canada for Canadian-produced cars "should not be one per cent higher than the price charged for the same cars in the United States," NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said Friday in the Commons.

"It is time that the Canadian government had enough gumption to call in the directors of the big four auto companies in Canada and tell them it is time to put up or shut up," Broadbent said during a Commons debate on unemployment insurance.

"For 10 years, they have been promising a reduction in price and it is time that we got it."

He said Canada has lost out in the automobile pact with the U.S. and the trade deficit has had a major effect on unemployment in Canada.

Canadian consumers pay between $300 and $2,000 more for their cars than U.S. consumers buying the same models.

A study tabled June 27 in the Commons showed the Canadian deficit in automotive trade with the U.S. last year was about $1 billion.

Broadbent said the Canadian auto industry employs more than 100,000 workers. But if Canada was getting its fair share of the autopact, there would be up to 40,000 more jobs.

Since 1961, Canada has suffered a $16-billion deficit in auto parts trade with the U.S. In 1975, Canadians consumed 12 per cent of all auto parts produced in North America, but only seven per cent of the parts were produced in Canada.

Broadbent recommended a change in the pact "to ensure that a certain percentage of cars produced on the Canadian side of the border are constructed of Canadian parts."

Workers 31% Unionized

OTTAWA (CP) — Union membership has increased to 31 per cent of the total work force, the federal labor department said Friday.

At the start of 1977, there were 3,149,213 workers who belonged to unions, up from 3,042,272, representing 30.6 per cent of the work force, a year earlier.

The labor department said the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) represents 68.7 per cent of the total union membership, with 2,163,539 members in its affiliated union.

The CLC says it represents about 2.3 million workers.

In Quebec, the Confederation of National Trade Unions has 172,714 members in affiliated federations, the labor department said.

Unions with headquarters in the U.S. accounted for 49 per cent of total Canadian membership in 1977, compared with 49.6 per cent in 1976 and 51.4 per cent in 1975.

Pension Fight Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Flora MacDonald said Friday she will seek a housewife to challenge the Canadian Pension Plan in the courts.

Miss MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands) said the plan violates human rights legislation passed by the Commons in that it does not allow housewives to make voluntary contributions.

"My wife would volunteer to sue today," interjected James McGrath (PC-St. John's East) as Miss MacDonald charged that the plan discriminates against 4.5 million women who contribute one-third of the country's gross national product-value of all goods and services.

Her remarks were rejected by Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde who said no province would agree to changes that Conservatives and New Democrats sought and that they went against the basic idea of the pension plan.

The debate took place as the Commons gave third and final reading to a bill amending the pension plan to, among other things, give a better break to some women in the home.

Ontario is expected to use its prerogative to veto part of the bill.

The two major provisions are:

— Separated spouses can arrange to share the pension credits of the wage earner. For instance, a divorced woman who had been married to a man for three years could apply to collect half the pension credits he acquired during their marriage.

All have approved this.

— Women in the work force can take time off to have children and bring them up to the age of seven without their pension benefits suffering. The time they took off to stay home would simply not count when pension is being computed.

Ontario has rejected this, saying it would undermine the pension plan. Because pension plan amendments require approval of provinces containing two-thirds of the population outside Quebec, the Ontario reject is a veto.

Gillespie Told To Resign

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie should resign over losses of $180 million in the government-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., opposition members said in the Commons Friday.

In heated exchanges inside the Commons and later outside, they called the minister incompetent and irresponsible and said he should quit because of the losses, most of them on the sale of a nuclear power station to Argentina.

Both T. C. Douglas, the New Democratic Party energy critic, and Allan Lawrence (PC-Northumberland-Durham) said they warned last winter that the loss would be more than $100 million. At the time the minister said it would be between $23 million and $40 million.

"He was warned and should have examined the renegotiated contract minutely but didn't," said Douglas. "Now he should resign."

It was the latest in a series of setbacks that have beset the government over the sale of a heavy-water reactor to the South American country.

Polysar Discipline Pledged by Macdonald

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald promised Friday to see that disciplinary action is taken against senior officers of Polysar Ltd. if it is justified.

He told Jean Piggott (PC-Ottawa-Carleton) that he would ask the Canada Development Corp. (CDC) to look at the Commons public accounts committee report criticizing Polysar.

CDC is the parent company of Polysar, and Macdonald said he would give them the committee report "with the indication that I expect them to take the disciplinary action that the facts warrant."

The committee report published Thursday criticized questionable overseas payments made by Polysar to obtain business, but left it to the government to decide whether there should be firings of Polysar officers.

Polysar, which is owned indirectly by the federal government, inflated bills to its overseas customers and then rebated the difference between that and the real price to Swiss bank accounts.

Rollback Bill Blasted by CLC

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) blasted the government Friday over legislative proposals to prevent unions and companies that have had wage and price rises rolled back from regaining their losses immediately when controls end.

The legislation, introduced Thursday in the Commons, "is further proof that government is much more concerned with keeping down wages than controlling prices in its lop-sided anti-inflation program," CLC president Joe Morris said in a statement.

The proposals say a pay contract or price rise that the anti-inflation board or the federal anti-inflation administrator has reduced is deemed to be an amended contract. So a company or union cannot claim, immediately after controls end, that they are then entitled to the difference between what they had originally negotiated and what the board had permitted during the controls period.

A union would have to live with the terms of its amended contract until a new agreement was negotiated after mandatory controls end. Morris said it was an example of the lack of consultation by the government on questions that affect workers.

"Wage and salary earners have lost millions of dollars as a result of rollbacks of wages they had negotiated with their employers, without the slightest evidence that the money they and their families had been deprived of has not been added to their employers' profits rather than lowering the prices of the goods and services they produced," Morris charged.

Asylum Granted

PARIS (Reuter) — France said Friday it has granted political asylum to a Bulgarian correspondent, Vladimir Kostov-Borsiov, who defected at the end of a three-year assignment here for Bulgarian radio and television. The Bulgarian news agency BTA said later the correspondent and his family were coming under pressure to be used against their home country.

Current System Not Working—Clark

TORONTO (CP) — Canada is an uncommon country far too big to be run entirely by Ottawa, Opposition Leader Joe Clark said Friday night, and it is time Canadians realized the current system is not working.

Canada requires strong provincial governments and a strong private sector to balance a strong central government, he told the annual meeting of the Canadian Junior Chambers of Commerce.

The present system "fails to meet the cultural requirements of Quebec, the economic requirements of Atlantic Canada or the development requirements of Western Canada."

Text of his speech was released in advance of delivery. While there is a need for a strong central government to establish economic policy and meet other common needs, many needs are not common across Canada and strong local government are essential to meet them.

In challenging "some of the basic assumptions of the present federal government," he said Canadians must recognize the language policy alone will not unite them.

He said he supports bilingualism and as prime minister would keep the Official Languages Act in place, "but it is foolish — and dangerous — for Canada to pretend that a pre-occupation with official bilingualism will suddenly transform British Columbians and Quebecers and Newfoundlanders into one happy family."

Swinging London may be be-decked with bunting but streets are grubby, food's dull and people are surly, says Max Low.

London: Flags and Filth

HEATHROW AIRPORT, London, Eng. — Time to sit and reflect now on the folly of all this.

It hadn't seemed such a bad idea at the time — a quick decision to fly from Victoria for a reunion with my brother Michael, who is an actor here, and my sister Diane, who had travelled here from Bougainville Island in Papua New Guinea where she lives. After all, I hadn't seen my brother for almost 10 years or my sister for 12 years.

But that was 12 days ago. In between, I've had to overcome my great fear of flying (though I'll tell you more of that in a later episode), had a few illusions shattered, and have been left with mixed feelings of depression and gratitude — that I live in Canada.

Oh, the reunion itself was marvellous. My brother whisked us around on a whirlwind tour of the best stage shows in London, including a grand bash at the spectacular Talk of the Town nightclub. And I must report that, once you get used to the warm beer, the little old pubs are still the best in the world.

Wimbledon, too, was big thrill even though I'd made my decision to come over too late to qualify for press seats. Still, the TV coverage was excellent and thanks to Jubilee Year and to Ginny's feat the atmosphere was sensational. And the very British commentators gave you quite a few chuckles with their remarks like: "Oh, I say, extraordinary shot!"

As I wait now for another of those huge Air Canada jumbo jets to take me home, I cherish a few good memories. Of buskers playing on Oxford Street; the unlikely sight of men's teams playing the Canadian game of field lacrosse on Clapham Common; the rabble of Carnaby Street; of shopping in that mixing pot of the worlds races — the Portobello Road market — and of a little old lady of 91 leading a sing-along while others talked of doom from their soap boxes on Hyde Park's Speakers' Corner.

But unfortunately the strongest memory I'll have when I return is one of dirt and despondency. In the 10 years since I was last here, Britain — or London at any rate — has gone down hill drastically. And the sad thing is that no one there seems to care.

Everywhere you go, Lon-

doners readily tell you how "grim" it is now. There's a hopeless feeling at the exorbitant prices (many things such as food and clothing are about the same as they are in Canada despite the fact that wages here are only a third as much as back home).

Often, things cost much more here, such as gasoline — or petrol as they call it — at around $1.65 a gallon. And a man who earns a mere $120 a week and only takes home two-thirds of that told me it costs him almost $500 a year to insure his quite-ordinary car plus another $100 a year for road taxes so he can drive it!

Food is dull compared with ours and the service is shocking. The English, once famous for their manners, have become surly (at least the ones I struck) and don't seem to want to help you.

A big part of the problem stems from the resentment at the great number of foreigners living here, especially blacks from Africa and the West Indies.

Many Londoners made it clear they don't like it.

As an old guy in a green-grocers in Ruislip warned me:

"Don't go near Brixton. There's nuffin but blacks all over the place. It'll frighten yer to death!"

Yet the biggest single shock is the flags and filth in Elizabeth's Jubilee Year.

All the way down the Mall are glorious flags and bunting, and stores, and even many homes, proudly carry giant pictures of the Queen, yet beneath them the gutters are full of papers, empty coke cans and other garbage blowing in the wind.

Often, it's hard to find a garbage bin but again the sad thing is that no one bothers to look. They just throw it down where they are. And no one seems to care.

I stopped once to ask a young man the way on the Underground and, after he'd told me, he ventured:

"It's terrible 'ere now. It's filthy. There's so many foreigners. They're everywhere."

Then he added wistfully:

"I wish I lived in Canada. . . you're lucky."

And I knew he was right.

FARMERS FEAR WATER COSTS

Joe Taylor is a dairy farmer in Central Saanich who has a particular reason for urging an assured water supply be brought north on the Saanich Peninsula in a hurry.

If there's an interim period of a year or two when farmers have to pay the domestic water rate for irrigation water, he said today, it's going to price them out of business.

And, he said, people from Esquimalt to Land's End Road benefit from farming in Central Saanich. Those farms help keep local food prices in line and they produce the greenbelt city people say they want.

Taylor is a member of the Saanich Peninsula Water Commission, organized this year to bring a bulk supply of water to peninsula communities who have been depending on overtaxed wells and Elk Lake.

Connecting the peninsula with the water system of the Greater Victoria Water district at the south end of Beaver Lake Park, the commission plans on building a trunk only as far as Martindale in a first phase, extending it to Sidney in the following year or so.

But until the domestic system for the peninsula is complete, the farmers will apparently have to pay the rate of close to $2 per 1,000 gallons for irrigating water. Some farms have their own wells. The other farmers simply won't be able to afford that, Taylor said.

Once the new trunk is operating, farmers should be able to get cheaper water from the old sources, the municipal wells and Elk Lake.

But it's the interim period which worries Taylor. He said today he would like to see the trunk pushed through to Sidney as quickly as possible.

The commission Thursday decided to see what help is available from the federal Agriculture and Rural Development Assistance program.

Water supply is the key to farming on the peninsula, Taylor said, noting that about 80 per cent of Central Saanich is within the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Berry Festival Sun Seen

A sunny day is forecast for the Saanich Strawberry Festival at Beaver Lake Park Sunday and the program includes everything from church service to square dancing.

Food is prominent on the agenda, with a pancake breakfast available at 9:15 a.m., a beef barbecue at noon and the traditional strawberries and ice cream served at 3:30 p.m. The municipality of Saanich charges 25 cents for this dish, with proceeds to charity.

A non-denominational church service will be held at 8:30 a.m., and the morning program includes an arts and crafts display and children's races, which start at 11 a.m.

A horseshoe pitching competition is booked for noon, followed by model boat display and demonstration, canoe and swimming races, Scottish dancing, horses, model aircraft and an entertainment group.

Square dancing starts at 6 p.m.

The Lonelyheart Letters Case

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The Victoria Better Business Bureau is looking into an international "lonely hearts" correspondence scheme that operated out of Victoria earlier this year.

Bureau manager Bill Tindall said in an interview several thousand persons are believed to have been taken in by the scheme that promised to help people "make new friends world-wide through correspondence."

Tindall said the promise appeared in ads placed in as many as 250 newspapers throughout Canada, the United States, Great Britain, New Zealand and Australia in February and March.

While no one can come up with an accurate dollar figure on how much money poured into the scheme, Tindall believes several thousand dollars were netted through the Victoria operation.

None of the ads ran locally. The ads invited readers to contact company called International Correspondence Services for details, and gave an address at 101-727 Johnson Street.

Tindall said the BBB investigation was sparked by a complaint from an elderly Vancouver woman.

The woman said she sent the company $10, received a list of people to write to, and then sent another $12 to subscribe to a monthly mailing list. That was in March.

She said she wrote to the company in June and her letter was returned advising ICS had gone out of business.

The BBB has subsequently confirmed the company has ceased to operate and that the man behind the scheme, identified as John R. Mills, has left the city. His present whereabouts are not known.

Tindall said Mills arrived in Victoria in mid-February and set up a mail-drop with the Telephone Answering Service (Victoria) Ltd., 727 Johnson.

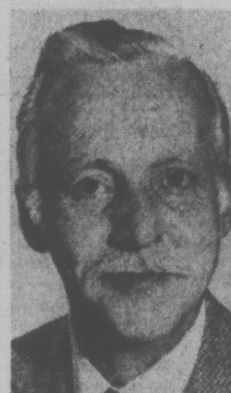

Mrs. Peggie Smith, manager of the answering service said Mills contacted her firm to handle ICS mail for the month of March.

She said Mills indicated to her he was applying for a business licence but city licence inspector Jack Callan said he never heard from a man or the company. (Neither, for that matter, had the companies office).

Mills described his operation as a service aimed at helping lonely people around the world, Mrs. Smith said. He told her it had been tried in England and proved "very favorable there."

Mrs. Smith said mail for ICS started arriving in mid-March. The influx, she said, was fantastic.

On one day alone there were more than 300 letters. The letters came from every part of the world. There was even one from Egypt.

... be wary

She said either Mills or a woman she assumed was his wife picked up the mail each day.

"They were a really nice couple. Well groomed. You could tell they had a nice upbringing."

He was about 42, she said; the woman, in her mid-30s. Both were English.

She said in the beginning of April Mills suddenly told her he was leaving.

"He said he had a bit of a problem. He'd been told another company (International Correspondence Schools) had the same initials as his and said he could no longer use that title. He was very, very upset he might be sued and told me to return all the mail to the sender from that point on.

"I thought it a bit peculiar — him wanting me to return the mail — but I agreed because by that time the letters were dwindling off. All we were getting was the occasional letter and I could tell most were bills from newspapers. We sent them all back."

Mills and the woman have since vanished.

Tindall said several newspapers in the United States inquired with the BBB in February about the company.

He said he managed to contact Mills then and the man seemed quite indignant the BBB would question his trade practices.

Tindall said he suggested to Mills there could be a conflict if his company continued using the ICS initials but Mills denied there was a problem.

Tindall expects most people who fell for the scheme probably won't want to admit it because of the stigma attached to lonely heart clubs.

"Besides," he said "a person stuck with $10 or $22 isn't going to create a fuss about it."

Tindall said the scheme points out the need to be wary of any mail order program. "The best thing is don't get involved unless you have some assurance or indication the company is an established, stable business," he said.

"And having a mail drop for an address isn't exactly my idea of stability."

Car Crash Triggers House Flood

An 18-year-old youth was sent to hospital early today after the car he was driving smashed into the side of a vacant house breaking a water main inside.

Saanich police said David Gordon MacDonald, of 1161 Cloverly Terrace, was returning home at 4:15 a.m. when he apparently lost control of his car at McKenzie and Cedar Hill Crossroad and drove into the side of the house at 1185 McKenzie.

The crash severed a water line in a bathroom.

MacDonald was taken to Royal Jubilee with undetermined injuries, treated and released.

Police had to break into the unoccupied house to turn off the water.

No damage figures were available.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Low-rental apartments and a recreation centre for senior citizens are part of a unique complex to be built by Cubbon Industries Ltd., at 1720 Cook.

Developed under a land-use contract with the city, the four-storey complex will replace the Cook landmark which was first developed in the 1910s by the Drysdale family as the Drysdale Sash and Door Company.

Cubbon Industries Ltd. is now owned by Bill Wansbrough, Norman Isherwood and Del Volk.

In a Times interview Wansbrough and Isherwood explained the new home supply centre, due to be completed in October, will occupy 15,000 square feet in two storeys on the side facing Cook.

The company owns 11 city lots — an area of 71,000 square feet. Wansbrough explained that spiralling taxation induced him and his partners to plan the centre-apartments-store complex.

Their taxes, he said, had risen from $4,373 in 1973 to $8,800 in 1976.

Isherwood said the project would never have been feasible without the cooperation of the city and both senior governments.

The apartment complex to be completed next January, will contain 52 bachelor suites, 61 one-bedroom units and four two-bedroom units. On the main floor there will be eight apartments designed for the handicapped with special kitchen and bathroom facilities, oversize doors and other features.

Rents will range from $150 for a bachelor apartment to $220 for a two-bedroom unit.

Isherwood estimates construction costs for the senior citizens' recreation centre at $300,000. It will be open to any senior citizens and have its own separate entrance and lobby. The 7,000 square foot centre will include a lounge, a games room, arts and crafts room, workshop, storage room and offices. In addition the apartment occupants will be able to socialize in two lounges on each of the four floors of the complex.

"Loneliness is one of the hardest things for the elderly to face," Wansbrough said. "We're hoping our building will help overcome that."

Isherwood stressed that the recreation centre will be turned over to a non-profit organization, such as the Silver Threads Service, for operation.

Esquimalt alderman Ken Hill, president of the Silver Threads Service board, confirmed they had been approached by the company several months ago and have agreed in principle to operate the centre providing funding can be raised for permanent co-ordinating staff.

"We'd look upon it as an extension," he said. "We'd welcome it. We're cramped for space where we are now. It's a very worthwhile project."

Record Sockeye Year Hopes Fade

VANCOUVER (CP) — Anticipation of another record-breaking sockeye salmon run for gillnetters was shattered Friday with the announcement of a closure Monday on the current Stuart Lake sockeye salmon run on the Fraser River.

The International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission meeting in Bellingham decided not to open the scheduled 24-hour fishery Monday in both Canadian and U.S. convention waters.

About 100 Canadian boats landed an estimated 200,000 fish Monday and Tuesday, worth at least $3 each to the fisherman and more than double that to the retailer.

"The reason for the closure is there has only been an escapement of 130,000 of the early Stuart Lake run past the commercial fishery," John Roos, commission assistant director said. "We require an escapement of 400,000."

He said that under normal conditions, fishermen were permitted one or two open days a week, sometimes three.

Roos said earlier the problem of not enough fish getting past commercial boats was that the U.S. government allows native fishermen to fish during closures. He said the U.S. department of the interior has in effect said Indians are not subject to commission regulations because of a 1975 federal court ruling that Indians have an aboriginal right to half the American share.

He said that if it were not for the additional Indian fishery "at times not authorized by the commission, we would have had an additional escapement of 80,000 by Monday."

United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union secretary-treasurer George Hewison blamed inaction of federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc for the closure.

"LeBlanc is accepting the undermining of the salmon commission by allowing the situation to develop," Hewison said.

He praised the commission for its work, but said the closure means fishermen are bearing the brunt of conservation measures.

Search For Nurses

VANCOUVER (CP) — A frantic search for 60 registered nurses for the new extended-care hospital at the University of British Columbia had enlisted only 15 by Friday, just enough to staff one floor of the four-floor, 300-bed building due to open next week.

The schedule called for two floors of 75 beds each to be available by Wednesday with the full building and staff in service by Aug. 8, personnel director Bob Grant said Friday.

Lloyd Detweiler, executive director of the university's health sciences, said the lack of response is puzzling.

"We have been doing everything we can, working with the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., and received between 150 to 160 names, but from those we hired only five or six nurses," he said.

Detweiler said there often was no answer from nurses who were called, or they had moved without leaving a forwarding address, or already were employed.

Jerry Miller, public relations officer for the nurses association, said that although there are 200 unemployed registered nurses in Vancouver, extended care "does not have as much interest for some nurses as other areas of care."

Foreign Orders For Railwest?

SQUAMISH (CP) — Mayor Pat Brennan suggested Friday that the threatened Railwest car-manufacturing plant may receive some foreign orders.

He made the comment following a tour of Railwest by a group of French businessmen.

British Columbia railway officials would not say why the businessmen were here, and the French trade mission in Vancouver said they knew nothing about the visit.

"They are interested in resource development and are looking at the possibility of joint ventures — it's strictly preliminary — and I can't say too much about it right now," said Mac Norris, B.C. Rail vice-president.

Brennan said later he's heard that rail stock and equipment orders may be made with Canada by the United Republic of Cameroon, a small West African republic.

The eastern half of Cameroon was under French administration until independence in 1960, but the two countries maintain close links.

Brennan also suggested that a possible $350 million railway equipment order for Canada from Venezuela may contain car orders for Railwest.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said this week that Railwest's last-ditch bid for 200 to 600 cars for CP Rail and the CNR will be backed by a government guarantee to match the lowest rival tender.

"If a 300-car order is won, the plant could remain operating until February, but will close as scheduled Aug. 14 for about a month until the CP-CNR contracts are awarded."

Separate School Aid Spelled Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia independent schools could qualify for an 80-per-cent subsidization of operating costs under the proposed Independent Schools Support Act, education ministry consultant Jim Carter said Friday.

Carter said in an interview that the 80 per cent would be the maximum and most of the province's 153 independent schools would receive less. He said it was never the intention of the bill to fully fund the schools.

Schools qualifying for the 50 per cent subsidization would have to agree to standards of teaching and curriculum. Carter said the province will put the heaviest demands on schools before giving the money.

He said many more schools could receive 20 per cent of their secretarial, janitorial and other service costs.

The final 10 per cent will be paid only to schools providing special educational services to the community not provided by public schools.

Plans Cut Back

VANCOUVER (CP) — Plans for a new federal building in downtown Vancouver will be scaled down to meet city zoning regulations and to fit regional plans for decentralization, Federal Works Minister Judd Buchanan said Friday.

The federal government originally planned to construct a building of more than one million square feet downtown.

Lease Refused

KELOWNA (CP) — The department of Indian affairs will not issue a lease for a proposed $250,000 mobile-home development on the Westbank Indian Reserve, Fred Walchli, the department's regional director, said Friday.

Walchli said developer Sigmond Schlies had no legal tenure on the land and must extract all developments placed on the reserve without the department's approval.

Jury: No Blame

FERNIE (CP) — A coroner's jury attached no blame Friday in the traffic deaths in May of Ben Larrusson, 18, and Lorne Menduck, 17, both of Fernie.

The teen-agers died when a pickup truck loaded with high school students overturned on a curve about 35 miles south of this East Kootenay community.

Rule Change to Block Him Says B.C. Indian Leader

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Indian leader Fred House said Friday a residency provision in a motion adopted at a United Native Nations (UNN) conference here is an attempt to keep him from challenging incumbent president Bill Wilson for the leadership role.

The motion said local membership in the UNN is open to any person of native Indian descent who has had permanent residence in British Columbia for 12 consecutive months prior to application.

Prospects Bright

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rising energy costs may help British Columbia sawmill equipment manufacturers increase their sales to southeast Asia, says Don Piccinin, of the B.C. department of economic development.

Piccinin, who has just returned from a trade mission to the Philippines, Malaysia, and Indonesia, said Friday that sawmills there are caught in the energy squeeze and are being forced to convert to better equipment to get more production from their energy dollar.

Kennedy's Habeas Corpus Fails

VANCOUVER (CP) — Irishman James Kennedy launched an appeal Friday in the Federal Court of Canada following a British Columbia Supreme Court decision earlier in the day not to grant him a writ of habeas corpus.

Mr. Justice J. G. Rutan said he could find no legal grounds for granting the application for the writ.

Kennedy has been held in the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) since May 27 while immigration officials try to determine if he is James McCann, an Irish Republican Army terrorist wanted in Europe, on several charges.

Mr. Justice Rutan ruled that Kennedy's lawyer, John Taylor, had failed to show that Kennedy is being illegally detained and that it was not within the jurisdiction of his court to interfere with the immigration proceedings as long as they were being conducted under properly drafted orders.

Taylor told Mr. Justice Rutan on Thursday that Kennedy admits he is a member and supporter of the Irish Sinn Féin, the national political party in the Republic of Ireland, but he said Kennedy was not a member of the IRA which was an entirely different group.

He suggested that Mr. Justice Rutan might direct that Kennedy be released on bail but the supreme court judge reminded him that he is conducting a habeas corpus application and that he had no authority or intention to turn it into a bail hearing.

Taylor claimed that Kennedy is being wrongly detained because the special inquiry officer had failed to comply with provisions of the immigration act in the way his report was made on Kennedy's case that if the judge should find something wrong with the report the inquiry should be a nullity.

He said that under the act, the inquiry officer was required to send a full report to the director of immigration but in this case made a report to his supervisor and that there was no charge sheet or any record of convictions against Kennedy.

He also told the judge that the warrant under which Kennedy was arrested May 27 ordered police to arrest and detain him and that the warrant was issued under the wrong section.

Taylor said the provisions of the immigration act, being penal in nature, must be strictly complied with.

Phillies Like Flyes In Loss to Pirates

By The Associated Press

It seemed more like a hockey game involving Philadelphia Flyers than a baseball contest with the Phillies.

But Friday's fight-filled game in Pittsburgh was played on a diamond with bats and balls, not on ice with sticks and pucks.

The Pirates rallied from a 7-3 deficit to defeat the Phillies 8-7 on a bases-loaded walk to Jim Fregosi in the bottom of the ninth, but much of the action in the National League contest took place between the mound and home plate. Two separate brawls in which three Phillies were ejected highlighted the contest.

One out after Pittsburgh hurler Bruce Kison surrendered a two-run homer to Garry Maddox to put the Phils ahead 4-3 in the seventh, Kison plunked Philadelphia slugger Mike Schmidt on the back with an 82 fastball. Schmidt took offense to being hit and headed for the mound, where he threw a roundhouse right that missed Kison. Both benches emptied and Schmidt was ejected.

After Schmidt's punch missed its target, massive Phillies outfielder Greg Luzinski tackled Kison and Pirates catcher Ed Ott, a former high school football star, tackled Schmidt.

In the bottom of the eighth, hostilities erupted again when Tug McGraw hit Willie Stargell on the shoulder.

HERMAN

"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, the bride and groom!"

Donna Young on Birdie Binge

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Donna Caponi Young's hot putter offset two bogies with seven birdies Friday and she fired a five-under-par 68 to take the first-round lead in the $75,000 Ladies' Professional Golf Association tournament.

Young, the U.S. Open champion in 1969 and 1970 and a four-time LPGA winner last year, collected successive birdies on the third, fourth, fifth and sixth holes.

Kathy Linney, who has won the only $2,134 in 13 tour stops this year, fired a three-under-par 70 to stand alone in second place. She had five bird-

OTTAWA (CP) — Before the start of the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship, several players predicted Dave Barr of Kelowna, B.C., would be the one to beat.

After the first 36 holes of the championship, which concludes Sunday, the quiet-speaking, hard-hitting Barr is making them look like prophets.

He had back-to-back 67s for a 10-under-par 134 at the conclusion of the second round Friday. Three strokes behind him is George Knudson of Toronto who beat Barr last year for the CPGA title.

Behind Barr and Knudson are 13 players within striking range, and with good words coming from the weatherman, observers are expecting a tight finish.

Scott Knapp of Woodbridge, Ont., and Phil Groux of Repentigny, Que., are four strokes off the pace at 138. Bob Rose of Hamilton, Ont., Moe Norman of Gifford, Ont., Greg Pidlaski of Mississauga, Ont., Tim McCutcheon of Kitchener, Ont., and Gar Hamilton of Toronto are tied at 140.

Complaints about the greens at the par-72 Hylands Golf Club course have surfaced. Many golfers feel their scores would be lower if the greens were cut down a bit more.

Barr has been playing steady golf, recording only one bogie while picking up 11 birdies. His bogie came when he three-putted the third hole. He said his putting has to get sharper, but thus far, it "has saved par for me on several holes."

Knudson who believes he has plenty of time to catch Barr, said his lanky opponent "hits the ball long and straight and puts well which is a pretty good combination."

Knudson said he was concerned about his putting, but added he feels the greens are to blame.

"I feel fortunate when I make a putt," he said. "The greens are dictating the game ... I can't get mad when I miss a putt because it's impossible to tell what will happen."

Among those surviving the cut were John Morgan of Victoria who had 143 after carding a 72, Bob Hogarth of Victoria's Royal Colwood Club and Bill Wakeham of Cowichan. Hogarth carded a 73 for 144 and Wakeham was at 145 after a second-round 72. Norm Jackson of Nanaimo missed out although improving from 83 to 78.

Officials said 73 golfers of the field of 163 made the cut. The winner gets $10,000.

DAMAGE REPAIRED BY THIRD-WICKET PAIR

MANCHESTER, England (Reuter) — Third wicket pair Bob Woolmer and Derek Randall revived England's first under early pressure from Australia's pace attack in the innings after it had come second cricket test at Old Trafford Friday.

Woolmer and Randall added 142 in just under three hours as England reached 206 for three at the close of the second day. They were replying to Australia's first innings total of 297.

The prospects of a respectable England total seemed to have perished when Jeff Thomson removed Mike Brearley for six and then eight balls later Max Walker picked up Dennis Amis's wicket to make the score 23 for two.

But on a pitch of no great measure, Woolmer and Randall set about repairing the damage with some unbridled stroke play. They raised the 100 partnership in 109 minutes and looked set to survive until the close when Randall fell to left-arm spinner Ray Bright for 78.

Victoria Extends Inter-Club Lead

Victoria Golf Club gained a half a point in the Vancouver Island Seniors Golf League Friday by scoring a 4½-to-1½ point victory over Cedar Hill at Cedar Hill.

Second-place Gorge Vale stayed in close contention with a 4-2 victory at Uplands. Royal Colwood defeated Glen Meadows at Colwood, 4-2, in the other inter-club match to move into a contending position.

Victoria now has 23½ points, Gorge 21 and Colwood 20½. Ernie Wright, Dale Hawshaw and Jake Peters won their matches for Victoria. Walt Summerfeldt downed George Bigelow for Cedar Hill's victory. Summerfeldt and Pat Patrick held their best-ball with Bigelow and Wright.

FINAL EVENT FOR SELECTS

Victoria Selects are competing in Calgary this weekend in the final event of the inaugural Western Track League season.

Selects are undefeated and are seeking their fourth and fifth tri-meet victories. Fraser Valley is also competing at Calgary this weekend, and may be strengthened by Edmonton athletes.

IDC PRE-ENTRY LIST BIGGEST ON RECORD

The biggest-pre-entry list in the eight-year history of the International Drivers Challenge series for open super-stock cars has entered this year's event.

The seven-race series, opening this evening at Yakima Speedway and including two stops next week at Victoria's Western Speedway, has attracted 31 entries so far.

organizer Reg Midgley of Victoria expects the list to top 40.

Included are drivers from Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma for the first time.

The Missouri entry is Larry Phillips of Springfield, who will drive a '76 Ivan Baldwin Camaro. Phillips, the midwest stock car champion, campaigned last year on the west coast and beat several top California drivers.

Baldwin Camaros also will be driven by Walt McWhorter of Wichita, Kan., a 20-year veteran of super-modified and spring car racing in a 1976 car, and 18-year-old Randy Ogden of Woodward, Okla., fifth overall in this year's Western World race at Phoenix in a 77 model.

Baldwin himself, defending IDC champ, isn't able to make it this year. He's obviously too busy building cars for other drivers and, as well, has just moved into a new shop at Modesto, Calif.

However, last year's Western Speedway winner, Roy Haslam of Victoria, has entered and so has Tacoma's Ron Eaton, the 1975 series champ and a perennial favorite here.

There are several Camaro entries from California since officials are allowing pony cars in the IDC for the first time. The wheelbase minimum has been reduced from 112 inches to 108 inches and the minimum weight this year is 3,100 pounds. A number of Novas, Firebirds and Chrysler Kit Cars, all meeting the compact specifications, have also been entered.

Total posted awards for the series is over $47,000, including a $4,000 points fund to be paid out to the top 25 drivers.

Main events will be 75 laps each with purses of $3,600, of which $800 goes to the winner. Fifty-lap "B" mains each night offer $750 in total prize money.

After tonight's program at Yakima, the series moves to Portland and Speedway Sunday afternoon, then makes its two Western Speedway stops next Tuesday and Thursday. Time trials both nights are at 7 with racing at 8.

The series concludes with races at Langley Speedway Friday, July 15, Skagit Speedway dirt track Saturday, July 16, and Tacoma Spanaway Sunday, July 17.

Is the West Ready For Nanny Brigade?

CALGARY (CP) — Twins Keryn and Aaron Bickman no longer wear pants. It's been "twosies" since Mary Black arrived in January.

Mary, 22, is a nanny from Scotland, one of the few currently working in Alberta. She was hired by Sonia Bickman and her husband David through an agency in Toronto. A branch of the agency now is in operation in Alberta and both Mary and Mrs. Bickman expect to see more British girls joining Calgary families as mothers' helpers.

"Mary and I almost feel we could set up an agency of our own," said Mrs. Bickman. "She has lots of friends who want to come here and I have had so many inquiries from other mothers asking me how they could get girls."

The Bickmans decided to get a nanny when Mrs. Bickman was expecting a third child. That baby, a daughter, Lannie, was born four months ago. The twins are 3.

"I had been able to manage the twins myself because they were both on the same schedule but I realized I would need help when the new baby arrived," Mrs. Bickman said.

Mrs. Bickman's cousin in Winnipeg already had a British girl and that's what gave them the idea.

"We are very happy with the arrangement. Mary is wonderful with the children

JOHNNY CAN'T WRITE

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A lot has been said about why Johnny can't read. Now a group of writing instructors at University of California is studying why Johnny can't write and trying to help him through the Bay Area Writing Project.

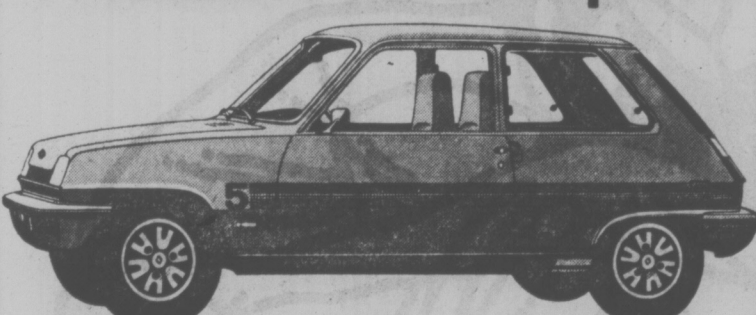

"They had the great American public out there instead of a hothouse of bright little students. In the beginning they were not prepared to teach these classes."

Many of these problems are turning around, Gray said, partly because of the "back to basics" movement in education and partly because teachers are learning better how to cope with more diversified classrooms.

RENAULT 5. THE PRACTICAL EXCUSE TO HAVE FUN. RENAULT

About Those Allowances ...

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — A properly planned allowance given to children in their formative years can help lead to financially solvent adulthood, says the president of a national financial services organization based here.

"A child's weekly allowance can be used as an important tool in successfully shaping his adult life," says W. Scane Bowler of Pioneer Western Corp. "The entire spectrum of money management—saving, investing and budgeting—can be taught through that simple process."

Bowler offers these suggestions on allocating the allowance:

- Determine actual monetary needs. Discuss those needs with the youngsters. Make sure they fully understand why and how you have arrived at a specific sum.
- Promise this amount on a regular basis and keep that promise, or don't promise it at all.

—Be consistent. Rules need not be ironclad—but they should be firm. The child must realize that he or she has to live within the allowance.

—Don't put a dollar sign on achievement. Monetary rewards should not be associated with good behavior or good grades in school. This can lead to unnatural pressures for money—in some cases, it can even be a cause of cheating.

—Do not be overly concerned with what other parents in the neighborhood are giving their children. Do not permit allowances to "follow the Joneses."

SIBERIAN ICE YIELDS BABY MAMMOTH

MOSCOW (AFP) — The body of a baby mammoth — prehistoric forerunner of the elephant — has been found in a block of ice in northeast Siberia, Tass news agency reported.

The ice melted partially after being disturbed by a bulldozer, revealing the animal's head, trunk and an ear. It is being kept in a refrigerator until scientists arrive to examine it.

Special Sewer Designed Especially for Rats

LONDON (AP) — Brown rats, the scourge of man for centuries, have gone on display in a European zoo—with a mock-up sewer for a home.

Per Seaton, an official of Copenhagen Zoo, says in the International Zoo Yearbook, published by the Zoological Society of London, that despite its vast numbers, the brown rat is not a common sight, living as it does underground beneath the cities. So the zoo had the idea of displaying the animal in its "natural surroundings."

Seaton and his colleagues toured Copenhagen's sewers for ideas and then designed an exhibit to enable visitors to look directly into the rats' home, to see them behaving as they might had they remained hidden from human eyes.

$137,944 DAMAGES

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — The June 22 riot at the Prince Albert Correctional Centre caused $137,944 in property damage, Terry Thompson, Saskatchewan's director of corrections, said Thursday. He did not say when the repairs are expected to be completed.

The exhibit had to be escapeproof, so the staff made a 22-foot imitation sewer tunnel from iron sheeting in the shape of a big C, with a breeding chamber at one end and a feeding chamber at the other—"an incentive for the rats to run up and down the tunnel with greater frequency," Seaton said.

Water, circulated by an electric pump, covers the sewer floor and, as extra touches of realism, the interior surface is cement-coated and bits of broken pipe, rubble and old clothing are scattered on the floor. The exhibit is located in a gloomy storage cellar under dim lighting and the total impression that it generates is one of "calculated unpleasantness," Seaton said.

Above the breeding and feeding sections are dome-shaped acrylic skylights, inviting onlookers to put their heads in to survey the sewer from the interior. The skylights are at different heights so that small children can use them.

Seaton said the staff thought their first rats, obtained from Denmark's State Pest Laboratories, would take about eight days to get accustomed to their new environment and come out of hiding.

"Rats are a highly suspicious species and in fact it took a full two months before they had completely acclimated and began to behave in a natural manner."

The rats are thriving. The original three multiplied in 18 months to 40 "very active sewer are particularly well rats and those born in the adapted to their surroundings," Seaton said.

Help Needed For Meals On Wheels

Volunteers are wanted for Meals on Wheels in Central Saanich where the service goes into operation July 18.

Jeannette McNamara, a peninsula Community Association worker, said a number of concerned citizens requested the service for senior citizens and handicapped people.

The service is in operation at present in Sidney, North Saanich, Victoria, Saanich and Sooke.

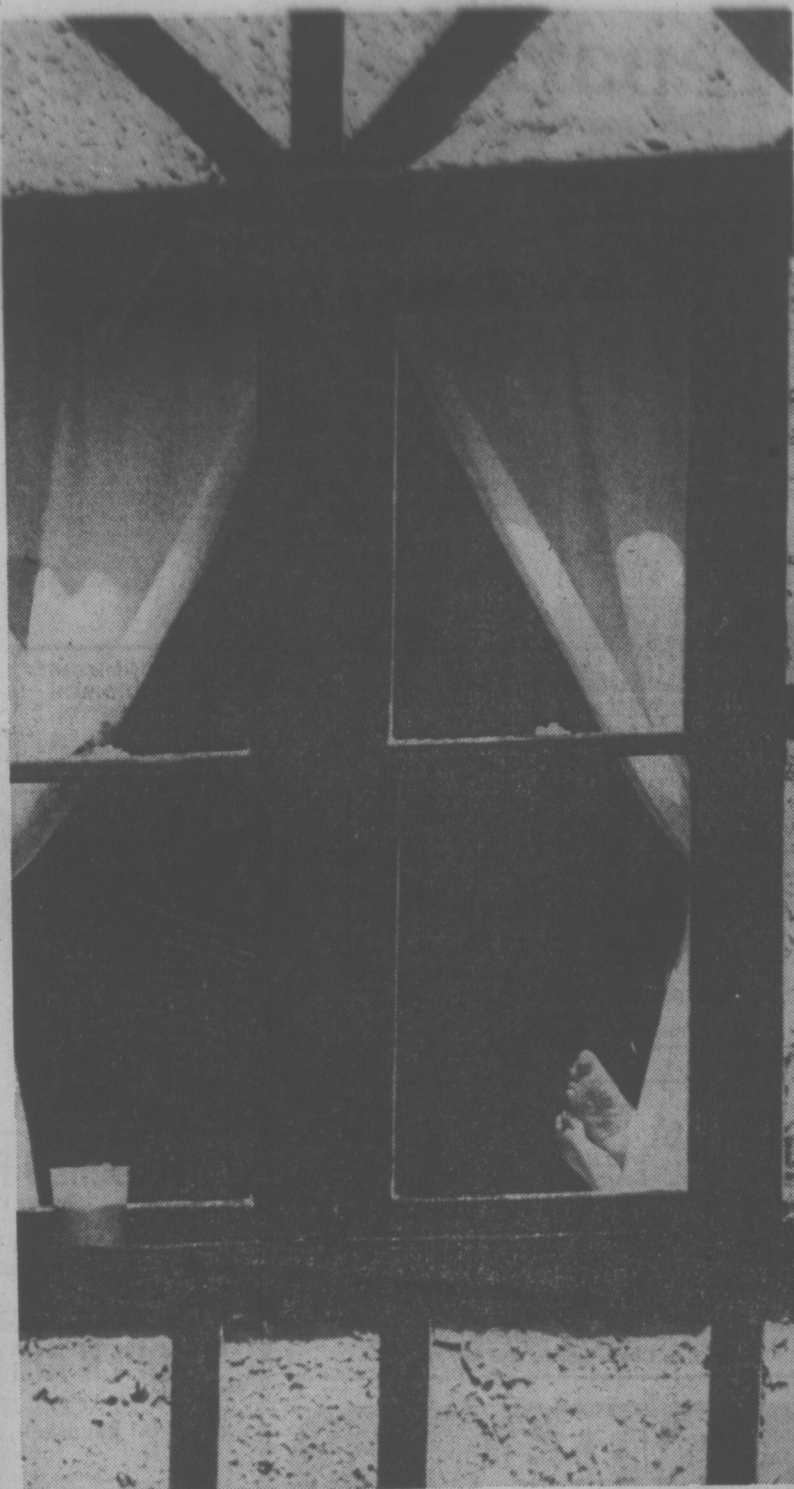

The basic aim of the program is to help persons who are elderly, handicapped, just out of hospital, or ill at home to obtain a hot nutritious meal when they are not able to prepare their own.

"We are looking for volunteers from Central Saanich to help deliver the meals," said McNamara.

She said the Saanich Peninsula Hospital will prepare the meals at a cost of $1.25.

The meals will be delivered during the noon hour by volunteer drivers, including some Lionettes.

Archives Gallery Displays Old Photos of Outdoors

A collection of old photographs of outdoor life and travel in B.C. prior to the First World War will go on display next week in the provincial archives gallery.

The photographs are from the collection of Frank C. Swannell, one of B.C.'s outstanding surveyors and explorers, who died in 1968.

Born in 1880, Hamilton, Ont., Swannell began surveying unmapped areas of the province in 1899. He worked extensively in the Tweedsmuir-Omineca country, travelling by boat, canoe and pack horses.

The exhibition will be opened Monday at 3 p.m. by Lt.-Col. G. S. Andrews, former surveyor-general of B.C. It will run until October.

Documents, maps and surveying instruments relating to the career of Swannell, will also be on display.

And FUN is just what 81 carriers had recently on their trip to Vancouver. They were guests at the Stanley Park Aquarium, where they were thrilled with the Killer Whale Show and other exciting exhibits.

They went up the side of Grouse Mountain in the Sky ride Gondola, and had a terrific lunch in the Grouse Nest Restaurant. They next went to Playland and had rides on the Roller Coaster and many others... and then back home with supper on the B.C. Ferry.

These carriers qualified for this fun-day trip to Vancouver by individual sales ability in obtaining new customers on their routes. This trip is only one of several throughout the year that a carrier can win besides many other sales awards of special prizes or cash awards.

Nazarenes prepare for Bible school

Silver Threads

Victoria Nazarenes will present two programs open to the public — a vacation Bible school for children starting July 25 and a series of concerts next weekend.

The concerts will be given by Image, a group of 11 college students from across Canada who are vocalists and instrumentalists at Canadian Nazarene College, Winnipeg.

The group will sing in Esquimalt Church of the Nazarene at 7:30 p.m. Friday and will present a two-hour program in Centennial Square from 1 to 3 p.m. next Saturday.

At 11 a.m. next Sunday they will give a concert in First Church of the Nazarene which meets temporarily in the Seventh-day Adventist Church at Pandora and Vancouver. At 7 p.m. next Sunday the group will take part in the outdoor gospel service in Beacon Hill Park.

Image is involved in many dimensions of ministry with music as the focus. The group is on a summer tour of Western Canada.

On July 24, 20 teenagers and three adult supervisors from the First Church of the Nazarene in Seattle will come to Victoria to help the Esquimalt church with its week-long vacation Bible school.

The young people will also make community visits and help with painting and repairs of the church and parsonage on Craigflower Road.

They are financing their way to Victoria and will be billeted in the homes of congregation members.

The vacation Bible school, open to children aged four to 14 regardless of church affiliation, will start at 9:30 a.m. July 25 and be in session until 12:10 p.m. each day.

A family program will be presented by the children for their parents and friends at 7 p.m. July 29, last day of the vacation school.

A few spaces are still available for the Royal Hudson tours July 13-14 and Aug. 10-11; Oregon Coast and Crater Lake Aug. 8-14; Seattle Aug. 23-25; Cariboo cattle drive Oct. 21-23.

Many nations suppress us—Witnesses

Richard Tannhauser, spokesman for Jehovah's Witnesses in Victoria, said this week his religious organization is now restricted in its activities in 47 countries.

Recent studies, he said, show that people are subject to harassment and persecution due to race, religion, national origin and political affiliation.

He quoted the New York Times of March 13, 1971: "The State Department, in reports made public today, has informed Congress that, with the exception of Western European nations and a few others, human rights are being violated in varying degrees by most of the 82 countries that receive security assistance.... The reports are expected to be criticized, both by countries concerned, and by human rights groups that may find some reports overly kind."

Tannhauser observed that in 1962 the General Assembly of the United Nations requested the Commission on Human Rights to prepare a declaration against religious intolerance.

"At that same time," Tannhauser said, "it requested a declaration against racial discrimination."

Originally the assembly requested a declaration on the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance. But the current wording is different. It reads "elimination of all forms of intolerance based on religion or belief."

Tannhauser said "some might interpret this to cast religion or belief in the role of the one causing intolerance that needs elimination."

Tannhauser referred to the preamble of the document where it states "the disregard and infringement of human rights and fundamental freedoms, in particular of the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief, have brought directly or indirectly, wars of great suffering to mankind, especially where they serve as a means of foreign interference in the internal affairs of other states and amount to kindling hatred between peoples and nations."

"In other words," Tannhauser said, "numerous compromise paragraphs proposed come down hard on religion. It declares that 'freedom of religion and belief should not be abused as a means to pursue any ideology or practice contrary to the goals of world peace, social justice, friendship between peoples and states'."

Tannhauser added that "if a country chose to declare that freedom of religion was being abused, causing a threat to world peace, it could call upon this paragraph to back up restrictions on the religious freedom."

In discussing the problem of balance on the subject, Tannhauser said member nations in the UN are concerned about past and present abuses created by religious intolerance.

He mentioned Northern Ireland — Catholics against Protestants; Middle East — Jews against Moslems; Cyprus — Greek Orthodox against Moslems; Philippines — Moslems against Catholics.

In Ethiopia the Moslems of Eritrea are at war with the Catholics. Tannhauser said, "In Lebanon, the people came through a tragic, religiously inspired war between those professing Christianity and Islam. The record of that war speaks for itself."

In Lebanon, Tannhauser said, 1,800 Jehovah's Witnesses have been completely neutral toward both the religious and political aspects of the conflict.

"Wherever we live," Tannhauser said, "we want to do God's will and be no part of any conflict."

The position of neutrality of Jehovah's Witnesses in all nations is based on their interpretation of John 17:16 where Jesus states: "They are no part of the world, just as I am not part of the world." Thus the Witnesses do not involve themselves in political affairs.

"The world is passing away," Tannhauser observed quoting the Bible, "but he that does the will of God remains forever."

"Since most religions are deeply involved in political matters, the position of many governments toward religion is getting intolerant. We are often recipients of harsh treatment because of the over-all attitude toward religion."

"Being neutral is to idealistic for some people," Tannhauser concluded. "But it is the only course for us in today's divided world."

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Canadian unity Naramata topic

Canadian Unity is the topic for one of the week-long study groups at the United Church's Naramata Centre on Lake Okanagan Aug. 6 to 13.

Other groups in the same week will consider the issues of world development, the theology of hope, politics and the Christian, ethics and genetic engineering. Two craft groups — lapidary and sculpture — will also be available.

Resource persons for the Canadian Unity study will be John and Lesley Lee of Montreal. Lee is an Anglican priest and director of the bilingual ecumenical Dialogue House in Montreal. He and his wife are bilingual and their children attend a bilingual school.

A week-long series of studies under the title Family Focus will be held at the centre from July 30 to Aug. 6. Groups will study parenting, families and legal issues, dealing with crisis, family Bible study, Transactional Analysis for teens and parents and "creating community." There will also be instruction in pottery.

From Aug. 20 to 27 a youth convocation will be held for young people entering Grades 10, 11 and 12, who will attend the week-long study session with their families.

Healing meetings at 2 p.m. Tuesdays in Victoria Truth Centre will continue this month with Rev. Lois McLean as speaker, but will not be held during August.

A vacation church school of Bible lessons, singing, games and crafts for children between the ages of four (preschool) and 13 (Grade 6) will be held at Grace Lutheran Church from July 25 to 29.

Classes will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day, and will be limited to 10 children each. Offerings will be taken each day to help defray expenses and the children will bring lunch. Juice and snacks will be provided.

Further information is available at the church, 383-3256.

The evening branch of the Canadian Guild of Health, Victoria, will meet at 7 p.m. July 20 and Aug. 17, in St. Philip's Anglican Church, Neil and Eastdowne.

The meetings will take the form of a prayer group followed by a celebration of Holy Communion with the laying on of hands at 7:30 p.m. Speaker in July will be Rev. Ken Collison and in August, Rev. Neil Robinson.

During September, October and November Rev. Gordon Walker will conduct a program titled Adventure in Faith.

There will be no meetings of the Guild of Health at St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra Street, during July and August. The next meeting will be held at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 23.

The Rev. William Burridge, director of Green Pastures Home of Health and Healing, Bournemouth, England, will conduct a mission on Vancouver Island from Oct. 20 to Nov. 7. Details will be announced later.

Gordon Head, Cordova Bay

Pastor leaves two pulpits empty

When Rev. Franck Patterson retired from the United Church ministry last week he left two pulpits empty — Gordon Head and Cordova Bay.

He has been succeeded at Cordova Bay by Rev. Frank Baldock of the Creston pastoral charge who is also preaching at the Gordon Head church until Rev. Russ Vickers, who is moving from St. Paul's Trinity in Nelson, returns from vacation.

The Pattersons — Franck and Muriel — were given a new station wagon as a retirement gift by the congregation at Gordon Head. The Cordova Bay congregation gave them a $2,000 cash purse.

In a tribute to Patterson at his final service at Gordon Head, Mrs. Geraldine Toombs said he had "rightfully earned the love and respect of all of us — from our first meeting with him and throughout all of his ministry here at Gordon Head."

"His faith, his gentle demeanor, his humor, his selflessness — will always influence those of us who have shared with him."

"Though he may step aside from his active part with this congregation, he will not step from us nor will his influence fade or our affections diminish."

She also praised Mrs. Patterson for her work with the church.

"Her advice has been sought on many occasions," she said, "and she, too, has given freely of herself to all of us."

The Pattersons have taken up residence at Shawnigan Lake.

Theologian to speak

A leading evangelical theologian, Dr. Carl Henry, will make two appearances in Victoria next weekend.

Henry, who is teaching at the summer school of Regent College, Vancouver, until July 22, will address a public meeting in Central Baptist Church at 7:30 p.m. next Saturday. His subject will be the Dilemma of Secular Man.

He will preach at the 11 a.m. service next Sunday in Lambriek Park Church on the subject Jesus and an intellectual.

Henry, 64, was a church dropout and the youngest newspaper editor on Long Island, N.Y., when, at the age of 20, he became a committed Christian. He first won wide recognition in 1948 while he was teaching at California's Fuller Theological Seminary when he wrote the Uneasy Conscience of Modern Fundamentalism.

Henry

His work became the rallying point for the New Evangelicals who wanted to embrace orthodox doctrine while rejecting fundamentalist excesses.

He was the founding editor of Christianity Today in 1956 but left the religious magazine after a dispute with the board. He is still an editor-at-large.

Now a freelance theologian based in Arlington, Virginia, he is lecturer-at-large with World Vision.

Perspectives

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

The magic of appreciation — its creative, healing force in relations among persons — is shown in a little case-study given in a book written by an English psychologist, Michael Argyle, The Psychology of Interpersonal Behavior.

A group of self-assured young men, university students, decided to play a rather elaborate joke on one of their fellow students, a girl they judged to be dull, drab and unattractive. The joke was simply in treating her for a time as if she were tremendously attractive and popular.

Argyle reports: "Before the year was over, she had developed an easy manner and a confident assumption that she was popular." What had begun as a rather sadistic little exercise became an agency of personal development and fulfilment for its object.

The desire to be appreciated by others is built deeply into our human nature. William James, great philosopher and psychologist of a few generations ago, made this observation: "The deepest principle of human nature is the craving to be appreciated." There may be some extravagance in that statement, but the desire to be appreciated surely is one of our more persistent cravings.

Appreciation helps a person to a good self-image. Albert Camus, the French writer who was given a Nobel prize for literature, put the matter in this way: "We help a person more by giving him a favorable image of himself than by constantly reminding him of his shortcomings. Each individual normally strives to resemble his best image."

The same principle was put by the great German poet,

Goethe: "If we take people as they are, we make them worse. If we treat them as if they were what they ought to be, we help them to become what they are capable of becoming." (This principle is illustrated in the stories of Jesus' dealings with the woman caught in adultery and with that shifty little crook, Zacchaeus. John 8:1-11; Luke 19:1-10.)

We are not called to be utterly indiscriminating in expressing our appreciation of others, but we should be very discriminating when it comes to pointing out to others their shortcomings and suggesting methods for their correction, no matter how kind and understanding and well-intentioned we are.

We must always be willing to take chances in expressing appreciation, giving the other person the benefit of all our doubts about him or her. There does not seem to be much danger, however, that we will let this get out of control: most of us most of the time do tend to be rather miserly in showing appreciation, except when it may be our immediate advantage to do so.

U.K. Coloreds Plan Self-Defence

LONDON (Reuters) — A British magazine entitled Race Today is urging creation of self-defence groups to combat increasing attacks on the Asian immigrant community in London's run-down east-end districts.

In a discussion document, Race and Violence, Towards a Command Council, the magazine outlines proposals for "active service units" of 10 people from the immigrant community under the leadership of a secret command council which would organize methods of self-defence.

Editor Darcus Howe, 34, from Trinidad, said the proposals arose from the staff's own work in the Bengali community. The monthly magazine is an independent journal of the black community in Britain.

Previous magazine articles had focused attention on the miserable life-style of the Bengalis, many of whom, it said, worked in crowded sweatshop conditions in the garment industry in London's east end.

Recent attacks reported by the media included the stoning and hounding of a young Bengali widow and her children from a housing complex, vicious bottle and knife attacks on teen-agers, and the beating up of Bengali men going to their local mosque.

The magazine said all that was offered so far in face of increasing racial violence was "a little moral support" from liberals and anti-Fascists.

"We have to protect ourselves, there is no alternative," said the magazine, introducing its proposals. The plan is bound to cause controversy, since under British law, the organization of uniformed or para-military groups is illegal.

The increase in the random attacks, some of which have resulted in hospital casualties, coincides with the rapid growth of the National Front, an extreme right-wing party which wants an end to all immigration and the forcible repatriation of immigrants already in Britain.

"The police and security forces in Britain have simply failed in their duty to protect black and Asian people from attacks by white racists. They have not even tried," said Howe.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said in reply to the magazine's allegations. "The police reply to all calls for assistance irrespective of race." He emphasized that the police are opposed to any form of vigilante groups.

There are fears, however, that setting up permanent immigrant self-defence groups could result in a similar response from the National Front and bring to flashpoint an already tense situation in the east end of London.

Spontaneous self-defence groups did emerge in some London districts last year following a wave of stabbings of Asian and black youths, but slowly died down as the violence ebbed away.

MDs BAD PATIENTS

LONDON (CP) — A medical magazine says doctors make terrible patients.

They are slow to seek the advice of their colleagues, said an article in General Practitioner, and reluctant to admit they need help.

"The doctor is more likely to see his marriage break up or commit suicide than the average man."

The magazine said doctors sometimes cover up for a sick colleague rather than insist that he should have treatment. It cites a case of an alcoholic doctor who slumped over a patient in his consulting room. The patient did not complain and other doctors hushed up the incident.

"All too often the sick doctor is isolated by his complaint," the article said. "He becomes the victim of a conspiracy of silence in which neither his colleagues, his patients nor his family verbally acknowledge the problem."

"He is allowed to retreat into a shell of deceit in which he convinces himself that everything is all right."

Commenting on the article, a London doctor said: "The demands of modern medicine are tremendous because the advances made by science mean that the doctor must be constantly renewing his skill and knowledge."

"Yet the general practitioner works shorter hours than ever before. He is usually one of a group of five, six or seven doctors who spell each other off at weekends and on night calls.

"The old country doctor was always on call but somehow he survived the demands made on him and, over-all, he seemed happier."

A Baptist minister, Rev. Alwyn Kingsland, said the general decline in religious faith is responsible for many of the ills suffered by doctors and people generally.

"So many of today's mental and physical disorders are due to man's foolish dependence on himself, his lack of faith in a higher power and his disbelief in the efficacy of prayer."

He's Got a Very Mixed Bag

COPETOWN, Ont. (CP) — Ben Muys has built a casual hobby in bird raising into a unique private collection of exotic birds that is known all over the world.

His collection includes a pair of buffle-head ducks, the only two in Canada to have been bred successfully. It also includes Japanese baltal swans worth $200 a pair, a Himalayan impeyan pheasant for sale at $60, and red-breasted geese from England, worth more than $2,500 a pair.

Muys, 33, a bricklayer, and his wife Sarah, 32, raise their birds on their farm about six miles west of Hamilton.

"I don't make any money," Muys said in a recent interview. "It's just a challenge to breed them. I've got people asking for some of them before they're hatched."

He sells about 200 offspring each year to various customers. The Calgary and Winnipeg zoos and the British Wildfowl Trust have purchased from him.

In turn, Muys purchases birds from private collectors, zoos and wildlife preserves throughout the world.

One of the prides of his collection is a pair of trumpeter swans.

"Three years ago, the Canadian government gave a pair to the Queen. She donated them to the British Wildfowl Trust, and they sold us a pair of the young."

Muys owns several rheas, distant South American cousins of the ostrich worth $150 a pair, whose eggs weigh almost 1½ pounds.

"They drop their eggs all over the field," Muys said. He collects the eggs, drains them and sells them to an American firm which paints them and resells them as household ornaments.

Other favorites are a 15-year-old pheasant with five feet of plumage and some green-billed Australian cormorants purchased from the Dublin Zoo.

"It's probably one of the nuttiest collections around, because you have to be a nut to do this."

The collection is uninsurable and must be guarded against disease and predators.

"Our worst predators are the horned owls," Muys said. Once they've taken a bird, they come back every other night, just like clockwork."

SHEPP RANCH, Idaho — Farewell Civilization.

Goodbye to telephones, TV, radios, cars, crowds and smog. For those who can't do without Johnny Carson or Merv Griffin, try Miami or San Francisco instead.

A private corner of heaven, Shepp Guest Ranch exists in the wilds of central Idaho, disturbed only by the voice of the Salmon River and the cry of the wind. Harren, the nearest town (pop. 5) lies 15 miles to the south. And then there's Dixie (pop. 18). It's up north. The nearest "big town" is Riggins, 48 miles downriver, and it has fewer than 500 souls.

A haunting roadless country, the area surrounding Shepp Ranch represents one of the last expanses of untouched wilderness remaining in America.

Moss-covered logs lie in the dampness of forests, and eagles wheel high overhead, horses graze on the hillsides and wild flowers show their faces along alpine meadows.

Such is the setting of Shepp Ranch, 188 miles north of Boise and 15 miles upriver from road's end.

As peaceful as the dawn itself, Shepp Ranch is reached only by boat or raft, or else from the heavens — like the eagles which soar with such grace.

Dropping into the mile-deep canyon (America's second-deepest gorge), the single-engine air taxi settles onto a dusty, unpaved runway after the pilot first buzzes the field, frightening off cattle and horses.

After this, it's back to the days of Davy Crockett.

For the next precious ten days, guests at Shepp Ranch fish and hunt and ride into dark forests and ponderosa pine.

Others wade along Crooked Creek or else laze beside the Salmon, Idaho's fabled River of No Return.

It was through this mile-wide gorge the Lewis and Clark expedition struggled (unsuccessfully) to establish a route to the Pacific in 1805. Save for an occasional "hunter's shack" it remains the same: white water boils along rapids and mountain goats climb to precarious perches high on precipitous mountains.

Shepp Ranch: The ultimate in peace and tranquility.

Incongruously, the ranch boss himself is a dropout from the world of neutrons and radiation. Jim Campbell, ex-nuclear physicist, has made peace with the earth and himself. While doing a stint with the Atomic Energy Commission in Idaho Falls, Campbell was attracted to Idaho's wilderness. Moonlighting as an outfitter, he began running float trips on its rivers.

One day he passed Shepp Ranch and the love affair took flame. Returning in 1973, he bought the property and hung out his shingle, ex-nuclear physicist offers peace on the trail of Lewis and Clark.

Among the packages is a fly-in ranch vacation priced at $45 a day, plus $70 for the round-trip air hop from Boise on a single-engine Cessna. (What with "inflation" next year's cost will be a trifle higher.)

Included in the deal are enormous ranch-style meals, a bunk, unlimited riding, fishing and rafting.

With facilities for only 20 guests, Campbell's wilderness ranch does a bang-up job of releasing visitors from the pressure cooker. Campbell's spread takes in 136 acres. An alluvial fan at the confluence of Crooked Creek and the Salmon, it is surrounded by national forest — hundreds of miles of virgin territory.

Besides his guest ranch, Campbell conducts six-day float trips down the Snake River into Hells Canyon, the middle fork of the Salmon and the Salmon itself.

And because Campbell is a strict conservationist, the rafts are navigated by oars rather than motors.

Rafters on the Salmon generally stay overnight at Shepp Ranch, the entire package coming to $388. The tripper is asked only to provide the sleeping bag.

Another six-day package combines a river-horseback adventure (four days on water, two days in land) for $425.

Next year Campbell intends to schedule a super 18-day trip to include rafting down the Salmon and overnighting at Shepp Ranch, with a four-day ride into Idaho's lake country and back to Shepp Ranch.

This one will figure out to about $600 per person. (Write for a brochure to Shepp Ranch, P.O. Box 3417-L.R., Boise, Idaho 83707.)

Shepp Ranch opens in March and closes Dec. 1, with river trips beginning as early as April.

During March and April, when wild flowers bloom profusely, thousands of bear, deer, elk, bighorn sheep and Rocky Mountain goats crowd the riverbanks. Later, as temperatures rise, they disappear again back into the mountains.

Driving in Norway is a scenic feast

Driving is still one of life's pleasures in Norway, where the motorist's question, "How far is it to the scenic spots?" seems out of place, because, as the Norwegians politely point out, you're there all the time. Norway's roads are themselves among the country's leading scenic attractions, and their picturesque routes along fjords, across mountains and past glaciers and waterfalls introduce breathtaking sights at every turn.

The fabulous terrain and occasional fjord crossings by ferry make travel times deceptive to the motorist planning his trip. Bergen and Oslo, for example, are linked by express trains in less than 7 hours, and plane's make it in one. But the most interesting and direct auto route is 310 miles, a day's drive in Canada, but three days in Norway, where 100 to 150 miles a day is considered a comfortable maximum.

Islanders pop daydreams of Robinsons 1977

The still Tahiti morning is a South Seas painting. The channel between here and the island of Moorea is motionless glass.

An orange wind sock by the airport hangs limp. Air Tahiti's planes are silent. Waiting for mid-morning traffic to far-away coconut islands: To Rangiroa and Manihi in the Dangerous Archipelago.

To Bora Bora and Raiatea and Huahine in the Islands-Under-the-Wind.

"The South Seas is still the stuff of daydreams," says an American resident over morning coffee. "Not a day goes by but we get a letter from somebody who wants to come down and live on breadfruit and bananas."

"It isn't that easy. The French don't want beachcombers. In fact, they don't want you over 30 days — that's the amount of time you can spend here without a visa."

"The idea is that a tourist is still thinking in dollar economy for 30 days. After that, he begins to think Tahitian. To buy carefully. Melt into the economy."

Along the waterfront Quai du Commerce, a few people

Travel Tips

By Stan Delaplane

are having coffee at Vaima. (Awe! Once it was our open-air meeting place. Vahines in print pareus. French sailors in red pompon hats. Now it's surrounded by boutiques and a camera store.)

Le Truck — the open-air country bus — comes to town. Each Tahitian man and woman wears a woven straw hat with a band of fresh flowers.

The prisoners from Fare Aure — the Iron House — come out to forced labor. Picking up palm tree debris. Before they start, they all sit down and weave flowered hat bands.

Life goes slowly in Tahiti. On weekends, you get out of jail and go home.

Monday you come back to jail to finish your sentence. "No Tahitian could bear it to stay in jail all the time. He must go to his family. Go to the reef. Go fishing."

A TV man from the U.S. has a splendid idea: He wants to bring his wife and small child to a deserted island. Live on his abilities, coconuts and fish for six months.

"At the end of that time, he would have a television crew come in and make a documentary. Swiss Family Robinson, 1977. Tanned, healthy, no worries."

This proposition is giving the South Seas tourist people fits, from here to the Fiji Islands.

"It sounds good," said the Tahiti man. "But this man — and the rest of the northern world — have a strange picture of the South Seas."

"There are uninhabited islands. For a good reason. They have no water. Or too few coconuts."

"The South Pacific is full of people. Islanders. They've moved onto every island you can live on. Why, there are islands nobody lives on. But nearby islanders go over and harvest the coconuts."

"So a TV man writes us and asks for a 'deserted island with plenty of water, fish and coconuts.' It's as though an islander wrote New York and asked for an uninhabited acre to live off the land in the middle of Times Square."

Papeete — it was a sandy South Seas town — is growing up into a miniature Waikiki.

Where the black-haired girls in pareus shared morning French bread and coffee with us, there's a boutique selling perfume from Paris. The islanders have always eaten well — the French civil servants insisted on that.

So you butter your bread with butter that was churned in Normandy. (It has an after-taste of chestnuts.) And one of the best chefs in Tahiti makes his own pate with island rabbit.

Ancient shrines beckon tourists to Iran's holy city

MASHAD — The great gold domed shrine sheltering the tomb of Imam Reza, graceful minarets gleaming in the bright sunlight, priceless mosaics of fabulous beauty... all these help greet the visitor to Mashad, holiest city in Iran, far east of Tehran and near the borders of Soviet Russia and Afghanistan.

The ancient camel caravans came through Mashad, laden with spices, jewels and other items from the Far East, and through the city still stretches the road that leads travellers eastward to Kabul.

This truly is one of the most intriguing cities of Western Asia.

One of the "green" cities of Iran, Mashad is cooled by the shade of its venerable trees and by the afternoon breeze which sweeps down the Hezar-Masjed Pass.

This is the holy city of the Shi'ite Moslems, who come in great numbers as pilgrims to visit its temples, shrines and mosques. Others come too, finding charm and beauty in what once was the capital city of Ancient Persia and whose name also is spelled Mashhad on many maps.

Mashad is reached easily from Tehran by air, or by highway.

There are many side trips easily arranged from Mashad, including Neyshabour, site of world-famous turquoise mines and the tomb of Omar Khayyam. It is two hours from Mashad over the excellent highway.

Tehran, gateway on my Pan American flight out of New York City and also served by Iran Air out of New York, meanwhile offers a wonderful introduction to this ancient empire.

Iran is a large country, three times the size of France. It is one third desert, an area of rugged beauty, rough terrain and sand through which the ancient camel caravans travelled to and from the Far East.

There also are some of the highest and most beautiful mountains in the world, with year-around snow that produces an abundance of water for the fertile valleys and plains.

In Tehran you have one of the world's great bazaars, some six miles of twisting, meandering narrow streets lined with shops offering native goods and other wares at low prices. The famed Persian rugs, copper and brass, silver, ceramics and Persian antiques can be purchased in the busy shops, as well as in other stores throughout the city.

One street is set aside for the renowned rugs. You can watch a carpet being made by hand on Ferdowsi Avenue and spend up to thousands of dollars buying a masterpiece for your home.

The Iranian crown jewels, backing for the nation's currency, are on display in the vaults of the Bank Markazi from 4:30 to 7 p.m. daily, except Monday and Friday. The jewels are said to surpass those of the British collection with the prize being the Darya-i-Noor diamond, sister of the famed Koh-i-Noor. It weighs 182 carats!

The collection has a globe of pure gold weighing 75 pounds and studded with more than 50,000 precious stones.

For information on Iran travel and tours you can contact Pan American World Airways, or Iran Air, Tehran is one of the major stops on the round-the-world service of Pan Am. Hotel information is available from Hyatt International at the toll free number, 800-228-8000.

ABOARD SANTA MAGDALENA—Would you travel to the bottom of the world to spend 36 hours gazing at one of its greatest natural wonders?

The question hit me the other day in Buenos Aires as I boarded this handsome 100-passenger cargo liner for a week-long cruise to the Chilean port of Valparaiso via the Strait of Magellan.

Sailing the iceberg-rimmed waterway Ferdinand Magellan discovered 456 years ago was the main objective of this trip, one I first considered with something less than enthusiasm.

After all, I had read about the area's desolation, its remoteness from civilization, its almost total lack of a human dimension.

But sail the strait I did, prompted by a touch of the climb-the-mountain-because-it's-there syndrome and by glowing reports from friends who had preceded me along Magellan's way.

Was it worth trekking this far to do in less than two days what it took Magellan a month and a week?

Without a doubt, the answer is yes. And I'll put the cruise from Buenos Aires to Valparaiso in the Most Memorable Travel Experience category.

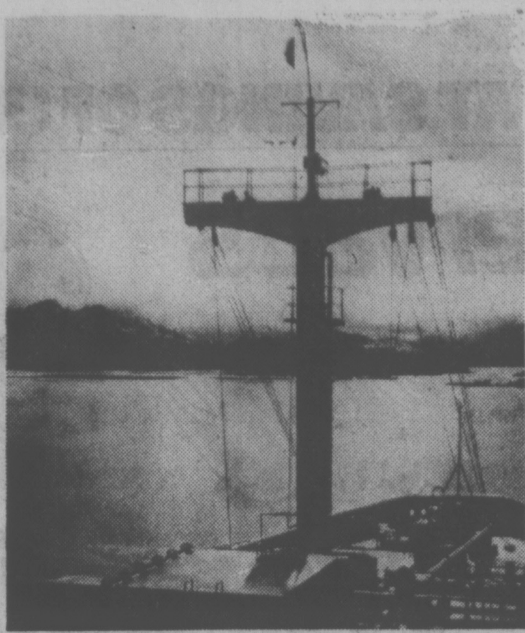

Awesome is the best word with which to describe this lonely world of peaks capped with eternal ice and snow, small islands thick with dwarf trees and lorded over by noisy albatross and funny-looking penguins.

Our winter being summer down here, numerous waterfalls were doing their own bit of sculpting on the rocks at the foot of the area's many towering glaciers.

Three days out of Buenos Aires and in rather rough seas, Santa Magdalena was abeam the Cape Virgins. Twelve miles to the southwest, at Cape Dungeness, we entered the strait and the choppy waters turned to glass.

About an hour later, twilight throwing a purple and pink mantle all around us, we entered the first of the strait's several narrows. The water acquired the sky's colors and it seemed to us that we were somehow floating in midair through the nearby mountains.

Reluctantly we left vantage points on deck for the Fiesta en el Estrecho de Magallanes dinner, which introduced many of the passengers to Chilean cuisine.

STRAIT AHEAD... Awesome is the word to describe the lonely world of snowcapped peaks and towering glaciers along the 300-mile Strait of Magellan at the tip of South America, seen from decks of Santa Magdalena.

The menu choices that caught my eye, and pleased my palate, included Empanadas Gallega (baked chicken-filled turnovers); Chupe de Marisco (baked sea scallops in cream sauce); Carne Asada (roast prime rib of beef au jus); Arroz con Pato (braised duck with coriander rice); Humitas (pureed corn with scallions, green pepper and cheese); and Espinaca con Pinones y Almendras (spinach with pine nuts and almonds).

A bit of deck-strolling was in order after such a meal. Too, shortly after dinner we sailed by Punta Arenas, a former Chilean penal colony that is now home to 100,000 people, the southernmost city in the world. Thus, despite it being near midnight, most of the passengers were out looking at the town as we sailed by.

A hardy band of our fellow travellers was out again on deck at 3 a.m. when Santa Magdalena was abeam Cape Froward, southernmost on the continent. Three hours later, about midway along the 320-mile strait, we reached its narrowest point, Crooked Reach. Only 1.1 miles in width, this is also the spot where the Atlantic and Pacific tides meet.

At midday we passed Fairway Island at the entrance of the Patagonian Channels and the ship's horn saluted the

We were enjoying an after-dinner drink when we passed Tudor Lighthouse at the end of Trinidad Channel and entered the open seas.

Santa Magdalena headed north to Valparaiso. My journey to the bottom of the world was about to end.

Judging a travel experience I often ask myself, would I do it again? In this case my response is: by all means.

Fortunately, this is a trip you can take almost any time. The ships of Prudential sail around South America via the Panama Canal and the Strait of Magellan every two weeks throughout the year. You can board at Vancouver, Tacoma, San Francisco or Los Angeles for the full voyage (54 days from Los Angeles) at rates starting at $4,205 per person, based on two sharing a stateroom.

If time limitations and/or budget call for a shorter holiday, Prudential has a number of air-sea programs, one of which I used for this trip.

Two very fine airlines, National and LAN-Chile, flew me from California to Buenos Aires, elegant capital of Argentina, for a few days of sight-seeing before boarding this Santa. A few days from now, after visiting the north of Chile, I'll again take to the sky for the trip home.

In all, it was an easy-on-the-budget three-week journey highlighted by our comfortable passage through the extraordinary waterway that Magellan discovered at the bottom of the world.

County Cavan's three plenties: Loughs, hummocks, O'Reillys

By STEPHEN RYNE

CAVAN — County Cavan is something of a stranger in Ireland. It is a rough county with three plenties: loughs, hummocks and O'Reillys. But in one way and another, it has greatly benefited from being overlooked.

The Cavan landscape is varied. Only the northwest arm is consistent in being mountainous and mainly barren. The only safe generalization you can make is that out of a total of 745 square miles there isn't a level unit.

There are more lakes in County Cavan than in any other county in Ireland. Don't ask how many — unless you take malicious pleasure in conflicting answers. Everyone has his own pet guess, many chancing 365, "one for every day in the year," a figure much favored in country parts.

The loughs come every way. Some are isolated, others scattered in groups, others blend or go into inextricable labyrinths.

The hummocks (drum in Irish, anglicized drum) are a tremendous feature. Because of them, Cavan is said to be a "basket of eggs" — a facile description not much appreciated by the natives who must make a living on them. The cultivation of a drum is arduous. For generations it was done by spade work. In the recent past, the horse did the work and downing. Nowadays there are tractors.

The O'Reillys, once the ruling chiefs, have clung to their homeland with extraordinary tenacity. Families of Celtic origin still flourish where they belong — Bradys, MacGowans (anglicized Smith), MacCahes, Dolans, Farleys and O'Clerys (anglicized Clarke).

The towns are all small. Cavan, the capital, has a population of 3,200. Cootehill has 1,300, Bailieborough 1,100. Other towns which may look important on the map and sound impressive to the ear may have no more than a few hundred inhabitants. There is a sort of triumphal air about all the towns as if to say, "We made it! In spite of loughs and drums, we got a site!"

The hotels fit in with the sporting and social life of the county. They are small and comfortable, and once you get through the swinging doors you belong.

There are no first-class historic remains in the county. Cavan was laid waste again and again, enduring a three-fold hammering in the 16th century. If, however, the antiquarian has sufficient to interest him, the archeologist is likely to be overworked. The loughs abound in crannogs and there are mottes, cairns, stone circles, pillar stones and burlans scattered everywhere. There are imposing mansions at Farnham, Ballyhaise, Bellamont Forest and elsewhere. Many towns have 18th century market houses — neglected buildings looking like broken down old gentlemen brooding on the glorious past.

If a man went to Cavan with modest expectations, he would get many pleasant surprises: elegant architectural trifles, Victorian gentileisms and town niceties of one sort and another. Cavan, the capital, has its share of dignified town houses and Ballyjamesduff seems to have had a town plan before there ever was town planning.

The county is ideal for car touring and I have some special recommendations for the car driving tourist. Three miles west of Cavan town is Kilmore, the ancient ecclesiastic centre and once thickly populated. Its attractions are diverse, including a century-old Gothic Revival cathedral with a Romanesque doorway, a bishop's palace set in beautiful parkland, the tomb of Bishop Bedell (he got the Bible translated into Irish), and a sycamore tree that was probably the first specimen introduced to Ireland.

Drumlane, ruins of a 14th century church and an imperfect round tower, lies four miles south of Belturbet. Having prowled about the ruins, you should then walk a few hundred yards up the hill so as to get the gray group thrown against the lovely background of Drumlane Lake. Saint Colmille founded this place, and thus it belongs to Ireland's Golden Age. Twentieth-century cynics like to refer to the "Ireland of Saints and Scholars" in a sneering way. They seem to hint there was no such era and that the Irish never made the saintly or scholarly grade. I'd like to have such scoffers with me in lovely Drumlane.

German Neo-Nazis on Upswing

BONN (UPI) — Neo-Nazis advocating a government similar to Adolf Hitler's Third Reich increased in number by 50 per cent last year and stepped up their campaign of violence, the West German government says.

Interior Minister Werner Maihofer, in an annual security report, also said links between neo-Nazis and Arab terrorist groups had been discovered but offered no further details.

Maihofer reported the number of neo-Nazis rose in 1976 from 400 to 600 and the number of illegal actions committed by them also increased 50 per cent from 206 to 320.

"The 15 or so neo-Nazi groups that exist want to replace the free, democratic system in the Federal Republic of Germany by a state system similar to the National Socialist dictatorship," he said in a reference to Hitler's government.

"Their actions, which for the most part were carried out by fanatical individuals increased considerably in 1976. They showed an increased readiness to use force to reach their goals."

The report said the neo-Nazis in 1976 increased their contacts abroad, particularly with "the small but active Nazi Foreign Organization," he said was led by American Gary Rex Lauck of Lincoln, Neb.

Maihofer said attempts of the new Nazis to organize larger than regional units failed in 1976 but they called attention to themselves through "spectacular actions."

"Militant members of neo-Nazi groups clearly showed their readiness to use force," he said. "In some cases police confiscated weapons, munitions and explosives from neo-Nazis."

Maihofer stressed his opinion the neo-Nazis pose no danger to West Germany and said at times reporters pay too much attention to them.

"The increased activity of neo-Nazi groups was greeted by the public with complete rejection," he said. "The few disciples of such groups represent no serious potential for neo-Nazi efforts, although their activity

Drury, 56, was found guilty of receiving cash, entertainment and gold cuff links from jailed strip-club owner and pornography merchant James Humphreys.

They're Together, Alone on the Outside

"We're doing time on the outside, while our men are inside."

That's the way Fay describes the plight of women with husbands, sons, or boy friends in jails and correctional institutions.

"We're different to single parents," she continued. "Our problems and our frustrations are different. Our needs are different."

Knowing the problems and the frustrations and clearly seeing the needs, Fay decided a short time ago (with encouragement from the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island) to gather women with these needs into a group where they could share their frustrations and gain strength and help through—and from—each other.

"I could do it where others couldn't," she explains.

"My husband is on parole with a work permit, therefore I don't have the financial worries that burden so many others. I'm not faced with the fact that I cannot afford baby sitters, so can not go out to work and must accept social assistance."

It's two months now since Fay, assisted by Sheila, whose husband is not on parole with a work permit, started a search for women who might be interested in joining the group envisioned.

Today, while still small in numbers, that group is well established.

It meets each Monday in a room at the John Howard Society headquarters. Right now the women who attend are getting to know each other and they are learning to talk about their various problems.

There's the need for transportation to visit a husband, son or boy friend in a jail or institution.

"We're arranging to share or to pool our resources whenever possible when it comes to getting there," Fay says.

It's a different matter however, if the husband, son or boy friend has been sent off to a mainland institution or, in reverse, if someone from the mainland has been sent over here.

elizabeth forbes

"There's the accommodation as well as the ferry," Sheila points out.

She then tells you of one mainland mother who came to Victoria recently to visit her son. "She had to stay two nights in a motel... and you know what motel rates are right now."

To offset this problem, Fay's newly formed group has established connections with a similar group in Vancouver.

"Between us we're going to try and provide overnight accommodation in our homes... here and over there."

Paying for baby sitters is another big problem. "So much so we found some mothers couldn't get to our weekly meetings because they could not afford sitters," Fay points out.

That has been overcome, for the present, through a volunteer effort among the women to raise some money for a swap and shop project.

Looking ahead Fay sees the group widening its scope of endeavor and gaining advice and help through co-operation with other organizations and groups concerned with those who break the law.

Already, she and Sheila have visited district police stations and legal aid groups to learn procedures and to establish lines of communication.

They are also looking ahead to special programs for the group, including films and speakers involved with the penitentiary system.

"People to whom we can ask questions and hopefully receive easy-to-understand answers."

What do their men think of this new group and its ambitious plans?

Both young women say most of them are "all for it", with a small minority against because they see it as a women's lib thing.

"That is farthest from our thoughts," they insist.

"It doesn't mean, however, if a woman did make up her mind to leave her husband, that we wouldn't give her support and help... but it isn't our main purpose," Fay added.

The purpose as she and Sheila see it is "to try and keep the family together, emotionally, and to help weed out the problems."

This co-operative group idea is well established in some parts of the United States.

It's fairly new in Canada but it is known there is a well-organized group in Ottawa as well as the one in Vancouver, another in Nanaimo and the one here.

An ambitious project up at Nanaimo is to make a study of ways to keep their men from getting into trouble with the law, Fay tells you, "and we hope, before long, to help with that study."

At present, however, she and Sheila are concentrating on reaching all women in this area — wives, mothers and girl friends — who are faced with the same problems as theirs.

"There is no need to be embarrassed about getting in touch with us," Fay concludes, "we're all in the same boat."

FEMINISTS DOWN, FEMININE UP

TORONTO (CP) — New York designer Oscar de la Renta says fashion has become more feminine and he believes it's because the Women's Liberation Movement now is less militant.

"Four or five years ago women were inspired by a mannish way of dressing," he said in a recent interview. "But today liberated women realize they can wear skirts and use them as a weapon."

De la Renta says it is difficult to predict where fashion is headed.

"People in general are conscious of quality now. They are working hard to improve the quality of life. That's why they want to look well, eat good food and entertain at home. They want clothes that are more relaxed."

Power Firms Cutting Costs For Customers

NEW YORK (AP) — Power companies are testing many new ways to bring less-costly energy to consumers.

For example, electricity can be stored in bricks at night for use the next day. The night rate would be cheap, explained W. Donham Crawford, president of the Edison Electric Institute, an association of investor-owned electric utilities.

"It's an idea that has been used in European countries for decades. In the morning the electric load comes back and the reduced rate is cut off. The method has not been used in North America before because electricity always has been cheap, but now it is justified."

The project is being tested by the Green Mountain Power Corp. in Burlington, Vt., and the American Electric Power System which is field-testing it in homes in areas from West Virginia to Michigan. It works like this:

Two units of an electric thermal storage space-heating system are positioned side by side—a conventional electric furnace and a British-built heat-storage furnace containing a brick-like refractory core inside a heavily insulated metal cabinet.

From 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. the conventional electric furnace heats the home while the storage furnace is charging and storing heat for use the next day. At 7, both units cut off and for the next 16 hours, a blower moves air across the hot bricks in the storage core to provide heat for the home using electricity only to run the blower. At 11 p.m. the off-peak direct heating and storage cycle begins anew.

"It's an idea that would be a good use of energy if we became heavily reliant on electrical cars in the future," Crawford said. At night you would plug your car into a storage battery.

"If enough people could be persuaded to use their electricity voluntarily at off-peak times, avoiding the peak hours—9 to 11 and 3 to 7—the outlook could change, but it would probably be difficult to get people to do their wash at night or to shop at 9 p.m.," said Crawford, whose institute offers a booklet that provides 104 ways to use less energy.

"As it is now, every time a company must meet new demands, it must put in extra turbo generators even if they are to be used only a short time to meet those demands. The whole point is that companies are trying to get more use out of existing equipment. If they could, the savings could be passed on to consumers."

Tests are under way to control peak use in other ways with the agreement of customers. A Detroit company has a signal that could turn off electric water heaters in homes.

A Vermont power company is experimenting with a radio control system that might beam into a home when the burden becomes too great.

Such ideas might require new meters and other equipment which would be an added expense.

"Connecticut is using some nuclear power successfully. Many people are frightened of the word nuclear, but a year's waste from one plant represents a solid cube of about three feet by three feet and they are thinking about getting rid of it permanently," explained Crawford.

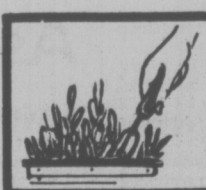

The fuel is controversial because of radiation fears, "but you probably get more radiation from an ordinary house of masonry."

In 10 years it is expected that more than 100 plants will have been built by 50 or so of the larger companies, he said.

Meanwhile, utility companies are exploring many possibilities of tapping new fuel sources, experiments at Northeast Utilities include laser fusion, which would use a fuel source found in ordinary water, solar energy, wind power, fuel cells—devices which produce electricity directly by chemical reaction—and energy that could be converted from solid wastes.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

As we thumb through our garden books striving to green up our thumbs, we come across frequently used words. It's assumed we know their meanings, but just in case there are vagaries, here are a few more definitions for your plant vocabulary.

— LEACHING: Dissolving nutrients or salts out of soil or fertilizer by the action of water percolating downward.

— NUTRIENTS: Any of the 16 elements that, in usable form, are absorbed by plants as nourishment. Plants obtain carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen from water and air and the other elements from the soil. The main soil elements are nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium. The trace elements are boron, calcium, chlorine, copper, iron, manganese, magnesium, molybdenum, sulfur and zinc.

— PHOSPHOROUS: One of the three most important plant nutrients, the others being nitrogen and potassium. Phosphorous is especially associated with the production of seeds and fruits and with the development of good roots.

— POTASSIUM: Its special value is to promote a plant's general vigor and to increase its resistance to disease and cold. It also promotes sturdy roots.

A yellow bark finish gold band with small rubies and diamonds set in ... Getting away from the rubies ... our eyes lit on a magnificent emerald-cut topaz ring ... a really good stone ... framed with diamonds and set in yellow gold ... $2950 for this beauty ... Saw some beautiful oriental jade pieces too ... A jade ring with diamonds, designed by Mr. de Goutiere himself ... Diamond and jade brooch and earrings which can be purchased separately ... Jade interlocking hoop earrings ... And two little fish pins ... brown and green jade ... attached together with a thin gold chain ... A fine selection of diamond earrings in modern nistic settings ... de Goutiere Ltd., 2542 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Have "happy" hair this summer

Well, one thing's for sure ... nobody needs to sell US on the calibre of hairdressing engaged in at the Witch's Hut and the Charming Lady! ... Chatting with George this week while he was snipping our tresses ... we remarked on what a pleasure our hair had been during a recent holiday complete with hot sun and cold sea spray ... and he pointed out that the cut and special perm we'd been given were responsible for this happy state of affairs ... So we got to thinking about our readers and wondering if THEY were experiencing "happy" hair this summer! ... Hair should be easy to manage and yet look very feminine ... and if yours isn't, why not make an appointment at the Hut or the Lady? ... Staffs at both salons are specialists ... and they really want to please you ... want you to look your very best! ... Gerry, at the Hut, tells us they're having enormous success with their specialized perms these days ... Agnes, who used to be at the Lady and is a whizz at perms, has now joined the talented Hut staff ... where Linda is still delighting clients with her expertise in frosting, and summer highlights ... If you feel your hair is dry and brittle, it could well be it's getting too much exposure and needs a good conditioner ... Don't just buy one willy-nilly but go into either salon and let them look at your hair and advise you on which of the fine hair care products they both sell will be best for you ... remember, they're professionals! ... Witch's Hut, 723 View St., 388-7368 or Charming Lady, 1712 Douglas St., 385-8133.

Flattering half-size dresses

Once-upon-a-time half size dresses were something less than smart ... but happily today's half sizes have all the fashion panache you could hope to see anywhere ... and what a boon to women who tend to be short waisted and need a little more fullness here and there in their clothes! ... Charmante's have a beautiful selection of half size dresses right now ... all the way from 12½ to 22½ ... in really pretty prints ... Sleeveless, short sleeves and long sleeves ... A number of them with matching jackets ... We particularly like the black and white print dress which we were persuaded a Vancouver friend of ours to buy in Charmante's West Van store a couple of weeks ago ... It looks smashing on her! ... If this is your year for a new duffle coat, get in to Charmante's fast because their 1977 shipment of Gloverall duffles has just arrived from England and the size range is now complete ... Colors are camel, sage, brown, white, silver, and French blue ... We know from experience how very fast duffle coats sell once words get around that they're in ... so don't delay securing yours! ... There are some lovely shades in Charmante's collection of ultrasuede dresses ... Shades like helio (lilac), light green, apricot, spruce green, light blue, a rich burgundy ... Basically shirt styles ... we consider ultrasuede dresses a worth-while investment in chic! ... Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Your answer to the "guest" problem

It's really nice to have family and friends visit you isn't it? But unless you've a guest room, it can prove a bit of a problem, shuffling people around and getting everybody bedded down properly! ... The ideal solution, as we see it, is to acquire one of the good-looking hide-a-beds you'll find in profusion on the 7th floor at Standard Furniture ... Nowadays you can't tell them apart from regular sofas ... Each year they get a little better! ... Among the 50 or so hide-a-beds on the floor at present there is every style and size ... Colonial, contemporary, traditional ... in double bed size and even queen bed size ... not to mention the very popular love seat which opens up to a comfy single bed ... takes up little space in an apartment ... and can have so many different uses! ... So many apartment dwellers nowadays make their second bedroom into a den ... Put a hide-a-bed in ... leave it made up into a bed ... and in a jiffy you've a nice bedroom where surprise guests can be accommodated without anyone being displaced ... Moreover, beds are so comfortable that your guests will feel welcome ... (but not so comfortable that they'll want to settle in for the summer!) ... If space is REALLY tight in your home, look at the big, comfy chair which opens up into a bed! ... Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

"Twice Around" is a very special store!

We think we've discovered the secret of "Twice Around" Fashions' prodigious success ... and we had to find out the hard way! ... This store, as we've told you on previous occasions ... sells clothes on consignment ... Scarcely-worn, fine quality clothes brought in by ladies who ... for one reason or another ... can no longer wear them ... and bought in turn, by equally discriminating ladies who enjoy wearing good clothes, and have a keen eye for bargains! ... (You just wouldn't believe what bargains you'll find here!) ... Well, now for the secret: Everything accepted on consignment has to be up-to-date style-wise, and in immaculate, almost pristine, condition ... Because we've put on weight we took some of our own favorite clothes in ... only to have Mrs. Empey scrutinize them with a ruthless eye ... point out a hidden spot which the cleaner had overlooked ... even tell us that a well-loved dress has passed its prime in fashion! ... With this sort of meticulousness no wonder everything in the store looks so fresh and new and delectable! ... As Mrs. E. says ... good clothes deserve a second time around ... but they have to be in perfect condition before she'll have them in her unique shop! ... Some lovely new things on hand at the moment ... smashing jumpsuits selling for less than a third of their original price ... "Twice Around" will be accepting summer clothes on consignment until the end of July ... There are great things to buy right now! ... "Twice Around" Fashions, 1029 Cook St., 383-3123.

Needlepoint the In Thing

By MAY E. MAC LEAN

This column is being written from Atlanta, Ga., where I have been a guest of the Southeastern Yarncrafters Guild. This is a dedicated group of ladies, (some of whom own yarn shops) that meets twice a year for seminars to improve skills in all forms of art needlework. The manufacturers of art needlework supplies also take the opportunity to exhibit the latest designs and materials available in needlepoint, cross-stitch, macrame, rug-making, as well as wool and yarns for knitting and crochet.

The bulky look in sweaters was featured, for even in the southern United States, they had one of the severest winters on record last year. I rather suspect that many ladies will be knitting these jackets just in case there is another fuel crisis.

Needlepoint was very much the "in thing" from pictures and pillows, Christmas ornaments, belts and bell-pulls, and one manufacturer even had Frisbees with a needlepoint centre.

One of the most beautiful exhibits was The Hatfield Carpet from the studios of Elsa Williams. The original rug of this design is in Hatfield House in England, where Elizabeth the first was held in custody by her sister Mary. And it was here that she heard of her sister's death while sitting under a huge oak tree. They have a pair of her hand knitted silk stockings on exhibit, and should you find yourself on vacation in this area of Hertfordshire, the house is well worth a visit.

Many of the needlepoint pillows on display were a combination of various tapestry stitches, and those that were worked on coarser canvas had parts of the design in a hand-hooked rug stitch to give the design a bold stand-out look.

Larger floor cushions were worked entirely with the rug hook, giving them a shaggy look, in keeping with today's shag carpeting. I should imagine that these cushions would be very quick to make and an excellent way of using up all the oddments of rug yarn that one accumulates from rug kits. You could even use two or three strands together of a knitting worsted weight of yarn. This will give you some ideas I hope for future gift giving.

This week's pattern, a Bargello cushion, is indicative of the new look in needlework and makes a very handsome pillow. Its design captures perfectly the feeling of both contemporary and traditional design.

Complete instructions on how to make this pillow on tapestry canvas, plus a chart of the colors are given on Leaflet No. 7715. Made several for your home or as gifts.

To order Leaflet No. 7715, send seventy-five cents PLUS a stamped, self-addressed, return envelope. If you do not have an envelope or stamp, please enclose an extra twenty-five cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: May E. Mac Lean, "KNIT and CHAT", c/o Box B, 485 Montford Dr., Dollard des Or-meaux, P.Q., H9G 1M6. Please be sure to state pattern's numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped return envelope for fast service. All back numbers are available at 75 cents each. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery.

Bomb Hunters Don't Scratch

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: I read in the paper about a dog trained to hunt for bombs. It says they sniff them? Are they the same, then, as the dogs sniffing for narcotics? How efficient is a bomb dog, really, compared to a man that knows what he's doing?—G.A.

DEAR G.A.: A bomb detector dog may find that hidden bomb 15 to 30 times faster than a human bomb expert. The dogs are capable of intense concentration. That, combined with the acute sense of smell, enables them to outdo human competition.

The technique in training, while similar to that for narcotic-sniffing dogs, varies in one important respect — the dog is trained when it finds a bomb to immediately sit in front of it. Sitting is the signal to the trainer. The narcotics-sniffing dog is trained to scratch and/or dig for the narcotics when found.

For obvious reasons, it is important that a bomb-finding dog resist any such impulse.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If you were most anxious that your new cat would not be a furniture scratcher, what kind of a scratching post would you get for it? What would you consider the ideal scratching post?—W.W.

DEAR W.W.: The ideal would provide a horizontal scratching surface of 6 by 18 inches, and similar width vertical surface extending at least 2½ feet. Some cats prefer a horizontal scratching surface: most prefer a vertical one and like to stretch a bit when scratching. A portion of a tree trunk with bark intact would be the greatest, but a man-made substitute would be more practical.

Cage considerations vary depending on the size and type of bird chosen, but some points are pertinent for housing any species. The cage must be of adequate size to contain the bird comfortably, with at least sufficient elbow room for it to flap its wings. The cage should preferably be metal, the finished surface smooth and non-toxic.

There should be no difficult-to-clean corners nor wires which drop down to form a V-shape or curl into loops — the sharp angles may act as snares for the poor bird. Food and water dishes should be easily available to the bird from the inside and be easily removed, for cleaning and refilling, by the owner from the outside. (Dishes which can only be serviced by putting a hand in the cage are obviously more difficult, so they tend to be cared for less frequently.)

An open-door approach also invites the bird to escape. (These points are doubly important should a neighbor be caring for your bird while you're away.)

The cage material should be heavy enough to handle its occupant, and the cage door should have an effective, secure latch. The latter points are particularly important in safely housing some of the more ponderous psittacines — parrots, macaws, and cockatoos. These birds will bend bars and walk through a lightly-constructed cage, and they'll learn to open the latch if it's simply constructed — and sometimes even when it isn't.

Special Protein Tested As Heart Disease Control

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A special protein, "carnitine," seems to have beneficial effects on the heart. Patients with anginal pain and those who have had heart surgery seem to have benefited by this substance, which is referred to as the "heart vitamin."

Although all the studies are not definitive, it seems that carnitine already has established itself as having potential in the control of some cases of coronary heart disease.

Dr. James H. Thomsen, at the Middleton Memorial Veterans Hospital in Madison, Wis., believes that there is sufficient evidence to continue to investigate carnitine.

Somewhat related is a study released on the value of massive doses of vitamin E for the treatment of heart disease. Dr. Dennis G. Caralis, at the United States Public Health Service Hospital in Baltimore, says, "Even large doses produced no measurable improvement in the 14-month trial study in patients with angina. But vitamin E did no harm, either."

On the other hand, Dr.

Evan V. Shute, of London, Ont., believes that vitamin E has some potential in strengthening the vascular supply to the heart.

Long-term studies are being contemplated to finalize scientific thought about any value that vitamin E may have for benefiting the heart.

Small varicose veins were treated about 50 years ago by injecting a chemical into the veins and "blocking them." Then the technique was discarded, apparently because of "inadequate materials and methods."

Now Dr. John T. Hobbs, of the St. Mary's Hospital Medical School in London, has revived the method and reported some of its advantages. If his findings can be substantiated, and if his new techniques prove of value, it may very well be that there will be renewed interest in this treatment for small varicose veins.

After a stroke, some patients develop a "foot drop" which interferes with their gait.

A remarkable biofeedback approach to this problem has brought great hope to many of these incapacitated people.

Dr. John V. Basmajian, a pioneer in biofeedback, has been rehabilitating many of his patients at the Emory University Rehabilitation Centre in Atlanta.

He and his co-workers are impressed with the value of biofeedback for this and other deformities caused by nerve problems.

Test Designed

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Northwestern University researcher said he is perfecting a skin test that can detect breast cancer in its earliest stages.

Dr. Georg F. Springer Thursday said the test, if it proves reliable in further experimentation, could save thousands of lives because the cure rate for breast cancer is high when the disease is detected early.

The test uses a substance called T-antigen, which produces a reaction when injected under the skin of a woman with breast cancer.

MSS HEADS WORRY

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada said today he is worried the society will not raise enough funds to keep its commitment to medical research.

In a statement the 1977 fund-raising drive was successful, but there is increasing competition from federal and provincial lotteries.

"We are not in trouble yet, but the outlook makes us uneasy," said MacGowan.

In World of Fashion, Adolfo's Got It

Gold lame off-the-shoulder blouse

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

NEW YORK — You name it, Adolfo's got it. Smock jackets. Short dresses. Sumptuous evening clothes. And, of course, suits in the manner of Chanel.

You could see a sampling of his styles in the audience when he showed his fall collection at the Hotel St. Regis recently. Marilyn Evans, wife of the shoe designer, was wearing a black knit dress with white stripes and telltale A's inscribed on the buttons. Jean Taiter, wife of the sportsman, wore a navy suit and yellow jacket that looked a bit heavy, "but it was cold this morning in Southampton," she said.

There were some non-Adolfo wearers, such as Mitzi Newhouse in a white Mary McFadden dress, Isabelle Leeds in a blue Courreges and Marion Feldman in a navy and white print by her all-time favorite, Chanel. But their defection wasn't serious — each had already made her selections from the new collection.

"I bet we all picked the same ones," Mrs. Newhouse remarked. Perhaps, but no matter. Two and even three women have turned up at Adolfo's shows in the same outfit and have happily posed in it for photographers.

"All the ladies have been buying the gold things and the taffetas," the designer admitted after the show.

The gold things include lame off-the-shoulder blouses paired with quilted black velvet skirts embroidered in gold stripes and flowers. The skirts are very bouffant and just below calf length. Like everything else in the collection, they were shown with black stockings and black low heel pumps, which gave even the lame styles a schoolgirl quality.

clude pleated long skirts with matching gold blouses and knitted cardigans. They're called evening suits and they're in the Chanel category.

The taffetas are fairly grand affairs in warp-printed floral designs with ankle-length skirts, in such Victorian colors as gray with brown or lavender with gray. Sometimes there are fox borders to heighten the grandeur.

Then there are Victorian blouses with ruffles that climb high on the neck, conveying a nolo me tangere message. They're paired with long satin skirts.

They're in direct opposition to the short knitted dresses, which often have bloused tops and cowl necklines. That's for the young crowd whose legs are irresistible, or for those who think they are. So are the smock coats or jackets in brilliant colors such as turquoise or purple. They're three-quarter length, shown always over black knitted smock dresses about a foot longer.

This hardly exhausts the list of Adolfo offerings. For traditionalists, there are the Chanel-like suits, shown this time in white with borders of, say, green and black. Chanel coats, too, slender and always knitted.

There are silk suits for the rain with black mink set impractically down the sides of the jackets, some plaid skirts paired with black turtleneck jackets (remember, everything's shown with black tights), and some really good-looking short jacket suits with full skirts that look nothing like Chanel.

Adolfo's an individualist, and he likes to think of his customers as individualists. If they all latch on to the same style, that's not his fault, is it?

dear abby

Marriage a Splash

DEAR ABBY: I realize that the water shortage in my area has caused a great deal of inconvenience for some, but count us as a couple for whom it has been a real blessing.

In an effort to conserve water, my husband and I decided to try bathing together, and all I can say is, "WOW!" It has opened up a whole new series of experiences for us. (He's 36 and I'm 35, we've been married for 14 years, and we have three children.) To those who would scoff at this lovely kind of togetherness, if you haven't tried it, don't knock it. — Jim and Jane.

DEAR J AND J: Can it then be said that "the family who bathes together stays together?"

DEAR ABBY: My husband saves newspapers and magazines. We've been married nearly 12 years, and each year I have begged him to get rid of the two daily newspapers and the pile of magazines we get, but to no avail. He keeps promising to go through them and cut out the articles he wants. He went through two years' worth about five years ago while he was out of work. But since he put all the clippings in one box at random, finding any one given article would be a major undertaking.

The crushing blow came this year when he had to store our lawn furniture in the family room because there wasn't room in the garage! (I refuse to let him store these magazines and newspapers in the house.)

I've threatened to throw the newspapers out or call the fire department, but he says I'm unreasonable because there's nothing wrong with saving newspapers and magazines.

Starting this year, I told him that if he doesn't cut out what he wants to save within a week of the time we receive the paper, I'd get rid of it. So far, it's been fairly successful, but it hasn't reduced the collection — he's stored in our garage. Every time I go there, I feel like throwing a few newspapers away. He'd never miss them, but I've never deceived him and I don't want to start.

Any suggestions from you or others who have solved this problem will be greatly appreciated. — DESPERATE.

DEAR DESPERATE: Tell him that he has until next fall to make room in the garage to store the lawn furniture because you will not store it in the family room another season. There's nothing wrong with saving newspapers and magazines, but when the accumulation becomes a nuisance and a fire hazard, it's time to lay down the law.

DEAR ABBY: You claim there's no such thing as a "frigid-dead" — only clumsy men."

As a former "clumsy" man, let me assure you that many men are conditioned through repetition to be clumsy. ("Not tonight, I have a headache," or "Well, okay, go ahead, but hurry up and get it over with.")

Thanks to Dr. Freud, I found someone to "untrain" me. — DAVE.

Canvas soil soakers have been mentioned frequently in this column as the most efficient garden watering devices. Far from a new idea the canvas soaker has been popular with gardeners on several occasions over the last 40 years, especially when watering restrictions were in effect.

The handling of canvas soakers is quite different to the handling of metal sprinklers, and the efficiency of a soaker depends on careful adjustment of the water tap to which is attached the hose leading to the soaker. Canvas soakers are again available at several local garden supply outlets in 25 and 50-foot lengths priced around $6 and $10.50. I have always found the 25-foot lengths easiest to handle.

If greater coverage is felt necessary, a 2-way "Y" connector can be fitted to a short length of garden hose so two 25-foot soakers can be used at one time. While the length of the hose connected to the garden hose can be 12 ins. or less, it is wise to allow about 5 ft. for each of the two leads from the "Y" fitting to the soakers.

A wet canvas soaker must never be dragged over the soil when moving it from one place to another, or it will be quickly ruined. To move a soaker, shut off the water and allow it to drain as much as possible, then pick it up in three or four loops held in one hand while the other hand drags the hose to the new location. Always pull on the hose, not the soaker.

Moving a soaker can be a little messy at first until one gets the hang of it, and is the reason for using short soakers rather than several long ones coupled together.

Each time watering is finished the canvas soaker is lifted from the damp soil and hung in a shed or carport to dry. Failure to do this can result in a badly damaged soaker by the end of the season.

Before storing a canvas soaker for the winter it is soaked in a tub of water, scrubbed with an ordinary floor scrub brush, and hung for a day or so in an airy place until thoroughly dry, after which it is rolled, tied with string and stored in a dry cupboard. Put away damp, or stored in a damp place, it will be covered with mould before spring.

Given the proper care I have had canvas soakers last for 10 to 15 years before the fibres rotted and holes appeared. Applying a preservative dressing is not practical because the dressing plugs the tiny spaces between the fibres and water will no longer ooze through.

The efficiency of a canvas soaker, as well as some models of sprinklers, depends on the correct adjustment of the water tap, and this takes a little while to determine.

The canvas soaker is designed to drop water gently at a rate that permits every drop to soak into the soil where it falls. If the tap is opened too wide water will soon be running over the surface, while too little water will not expand the canvas enough to cause the dripping.

Until the gardener is familiar with the correct tap opening, some experimenting is necessary. When the dry soaker has been placed in position and all twists removed, the tap is opened fairly wide until the soaker is filled from end to end, then reduced until the required speed of dripping is reached.

On sloping ground it will be noticed the water tends to fill the low end of the soaker leaving the upper half with insufficient water to drip properly. If the tap is opened in an effort to fill the entire soaker, severe surface flooding becomes evident at the low end.

This condition can be corrected very easily with a few spring clothes pegs. The pegs are clipped part way over the canvas to reduce its diameter and hold back the water. The clothes pegs are spaced as necessary to give the required drip effect over the full length of the soaker. The greater the slope the more pegs will be needed. Possibly the greatest difference we notice between a sprinkler and a canvas soaker is the length of time needed for water to penetrate to a given depth. Since all the water from a soaker goes directly into the soil beneath it, effective penetration is reached in one-fifth to one-eighth of the time needed by a sprinkler.

The rate of penetration depends on the type of soil, while the frequency of watering depends on the amount of sun in the soil. Each gardener has to experiment at the start to determine the minimum of time for the water to reach root level, and the number of days the soil at root level will hold that water.

To obtain this information and be able to set up a suitable watering schedule, we need a hand trowel or a small spade to make a few test holes. Holes about 8 ins. deep will do in the vegetable garden, 10 to 12 inches among perennials or small shrubs, and 16 inches for established shrubs or small trees.

When first using a canvas soaker in the vegetable patch, shut off the water after 30 minutes and dig a test hole directly beneath the soaker to find out how deep the water has gone. From our findings we can make a reasonable estimate of the total time needed for water to reach the required depth. All test holes are refilled with soil after the depth of penetration has been determined.

Since we must exercise care not to damage the roots of permanent plants in beds or borders, it is wise to have one end of the soaker over an area where roots are not likely to extend and dig our test hole in that spot.

The reason for using canvas soil soakers is to reduce water consumption and obtain the maximum benefits from every drop we pay for, therefore it is important not to apply any more than is necessary at one time.

Three or four days after watering, dig a few test holes to find out the state of moisture at the required depths, then estimate the number of days before another soaking will be necessary.

In a half-acre market garden, when three of the four sprinklers normally used were replaced with canvas soakers, water consumption was reduced by one hundred thousand gallons a month during summer, and much improved plant growth was noted.

It takes a while to adjust one's watering habits when changing from sprinklers to canvas soakers for watering lawns, trees, shrubs and vegetables, and it requires more frequent attention to moving the watering device but the savings are in water, obtaining greater benefits from the amount used, and in time because watering is needed less frequently.

Kenya Ends Big-Game Hunting

NAIROBI (Reuters) — The Kenyan government has ordered an end to big-game hunting, dealing a death blow to one of Africa's most colorful legends.

To track and kill a "big cat" or stand up to a charging rhinoceros was a major part of Kenya's attraction for hunters, most of them white foreigners, long before Ernest Hemingway immortalized it in literature.

But now, on the orders of Wildlife Minister Mathews Ogotu, all hunting is banned, gun licences are revoked and professional guides and their high-paying clients will have to make do with a camera.

The 100 or more men who made comfortable livings by satisfying the killer instincts of some of the rich say Ogotu has aimed at the wrong target.

Cowichan Referendum Oct. 1

DUNCAN — October 1 has been tentatively set for a referendum dealing with amalgamation of existing municipalities and unorganized territories in the Cowichan Valley.

Chris Woodward, associate deputy minister of municipal affairs, said one option is to amalgamate all valley municipalities, including Eagle Heights and Saltair which are both unorganized areas.

Another option would be to divide the Cowichan Valley in half, making one municipality in the Chemainus-Crofton-Saltair area and the other to include areas south of Chemainus.

The third option would be to leave boundaries as they are. The total population of the areas involved is about 20,000.

They and other more disinterested observers argue that it is the hordes of poachers, paying none of the hefty licence fees, who are the real menace to one of the richest collections of wildlife in the world.

The government agrees and plans a major increase in anti-poaching units in the next few months with the help of $17 million from the World Bank.

Steps may also be taken to tighten up on curio shops selling game trophies which provide the main incentive for the poacher.

But the first shot was against the hunter, presumably because he was easiest to hit. In order to operate at all, the professionals had to have licences. One for a lion, for example, used to cost the equivalent of $380.

The government says it will lose about $4.2 million a year in licence fees. But officials say this is a fair price to pay for the conservation of Kenya's heritage.

With clients willing to pay upwards of $5,000 for a few weeks' safari, the hunters stand to lose a lot because of the ban.

"What most people don't realize is that we are the people most interested in conservation as we're planning for our own future for the next 40 years," commented one angry professional.

One tour operator could see two sides to the argument: "The poachers used to be scared by hunting camps all over the country," said Jock Anderson of the East African wildlife safaris. "Now the camps will go and they will have a field day."

"On the other hand, licensed hunters were taking the best trophies, such as tusks and horns. Now we can expect to see the best-looking animals around."

A wildlife ministry spokesman estimated that poaching and hunting accounted for one-third of the wild animals killed in Kenya each year, with poaching taking much the bigger portion.

The other two-thirds were victims of drought. There are high hopes this year that heavy rains, which are causing havoc to the human population, will help wildlife. Ironically, that might lead to a situation where there are

A unique exhibition that opened in Calgary early this month comes to Victoria next week and will be on display in the Hillside Shopping Mall

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Prison Arts 77 is the eighth annual exhibition of arts and crafts from Canadian correctional institutions.

The culmination of a program established to provide opportunities for creative rehabilitation, it had its beginning nine years ago as a contest for a Christmas card design.

Each year inmates submit paintings, sculptures, writings, craftwork and occasional musical entries to the Prison Arts Foundation which is now a federally chartered organization. Each year the number of entrants has grown and this year is expected to be the largest yet.

The therapeutic value of creative activities is stressed and judging is carried out with that aspect as a guide, as well as talent, originality and individual effort.

Entries are judged by Canadian artists and writers and a selection is made for the travelling exhibition which this year tours from Victoria to Quebec City.

"In the past seven years we've seen concrete evidence that the sense of accomplishment and the reward of recognition are often genuine first steps on the road to recovery," says Marlene Knecht.

tel, executive director of the Foundation.

The Hillside Mall showing is under the sponsorship of the Victoria Council of the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island.

Utley's Art Galleries, 9182 East Saanich Road, is opening a show Friday dealing with "Satire and Humour in Art". With a preview from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. Artists involved are Pat Martin Bates, Peter Daglish, Robin Skelton, Herbert Siebner, Karl Spreitz, Windsor Utley, Yusuf Uzel and Jack Wilkinson. The show will continue through July 31.

GALLERY hours are 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

A summer-long celebration of B.C. crafts at the Circle Craft Centre, 434 Kingston, features a July through September exhibit, B.C. Crafts in Use, which demonstrates professional crafts in an environment that highlights their functionalism. The Centre is open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

By AUDREY JOHNSON

There is a quietude about Linda Houghton Daniels' presence, a gentle reflectiveness of manner that suggests only one aspect of her wide and deep musical nature. It tells you something of her sensitivity and poetic empathy for the music she plays but nothing of the power and vitality with which she handles her violin.

Music has been the central focus of Linda's life since her childhood in St. Louis, Mo. and now at 33 — she looks 10 years younger and is one woman who finds that fact inconvenient — is an artist of wide experience and equally valuable as soloist or ensemble performer.

Linda's surprising reaction to looking so young is the result of many occasions when she had difficulty convincing concert managers and agents of her mature professionalism.

Linda has been her home for five years. She is married to Dr. C. B. (Danny) Daniels of the University of Victoria department of philosophy and is herself a member of the teaching faculty in the department of music.

She has played intermittently with Victoria Symphony and has made various other solo and ensemble appearances in this area. This month finds her actively engaged with Summer Music '77 under auspices of the UVic music department, as well as with teaching at the Courtenay Youth Music Centre.

An important pair of solo recitals Tuesday and Thursday will see her teamed with Beverley Hamway, official pianist with the Seattle Symphony and much in demand as an accompanist throughout the Pacific Northwest, participating in as many as 30 to 40 recitals in a year.

The recitals will take place Tuesday and Thursday in the MacLaurin Building auditorium at UVic as part of the Summer Music series. Starting time is 8 p.m.

Following graduation from Eastman School in New York, Linda was granted a Fulbright Fellowship for two years' study in Germany. A good deal of concertizing in Germany and Europe followed and she spent some time in Amsterdam as principal cello with the National Ballet and Dance Theatre Orchestra.

LINDA . . . ear for languages too

Linda's musical ear is also attuned to the music of language; she has learned some Danish and speaks Dutch and German with ease and now is intent on learning to converse with fair fluency in Japanese. There is some urgency to this ambition because she is expecting a visit soon from a six-year-old niece from Japan, daughter of her brother and his Japanese wife.

Music is an indispensable aspect of life to Linda as it is to all dedicated professional musicians. But while quietly admitting that she defines her personal and particular areas as chamber music performance, concertizing and teaching a selected group of students.

"Actually," she says, "I'm a homebody — I wouldn't want to be away half the time on concert tours, although I enjoy an out-of-town engagement now and then."

Her "home" activities include cooking along gourmet lines, although she says, this interest only developed after marriage. "Before that my mother used to discourage me from going into the kitchen, saying I'd have to learn soon enough."

Linda particularly enjoys the many wonders of Chinese cooking and otherwise finds it's quite an occupation to care for their townhouse full of plants — "we must have 200 of them" — an interest she shares with her husband.

To sustain her high professional level of performance she does a minimum practice of three hours a day on the cello and when approaching a performance, as now, at least a concentrated five hours daily.

"I'm really very goal-oriented," she says. "I do my best work when there's a concert or recital to be prepared."

Open Space Open Again

For four days next week, beginning Wednesday, a mood of celebration will prevail at 510 Fort. The festivities will mark the re-opening of Open Space Gallery, which has been closed for several months while $112,000 worth of renovations were being made to the centre.

Since its opening in 1972, Open Space has proved a lively and useful cultural attribute for the whole area. The renovation project has been made possible through grants from the National Museums Corporation, Local Initiatives Program, the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation and local donations.

Re-opening events begin with a reception Wednesday from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Open house will continue through Saturday, the hours being 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Each evening the artist-in-residence, Santo Cervello, will present his widely discussed one-man drama, The Metamorphosis, beginning at 8 p.m.

The new Open Space's program emphasis, according to the latest release, will focus on art gallery activity and exploration in various media. Two public art galleries are housed on the second floor of the building. The ground floor is occupied by the Legal Aid Society. Open Space Gallery will be devoted to paintings, prints, sculpture and other arts and crafts; the Secession Gallery will be devoted, as before, to photography.

Extensive exhibition programs have already been planned. Opening events include silkscreen prints by Andy Warhol, a Group Invitational Show co-sponsored by Open Space and the Secession Gallery, works by abstract photographer Bernard Freeman.

An important concept is the audio-visual studio, Access, which is now ready for production. Two university students have been hired to organize the program and have also begun work on a booklet outlining other media centres and equipment available to the public.

Community and visiting artists will be able to prepare and develop their material using this resource. It is also planned to develop a library of sound and video tapes which will become available to individuals and community institutions.

Resident artists who have been retained on fees for one or two months include, besides Cervello, Peggy Cady, Laird Campbell and Allan Detheridge.

These artists will work within the resources of the gallery centre to develop their own programs, while teaming at the same time with other artists from the community-at-large.

Children's mixed media workshops are now under way, supervised by Ms. Cady, and will continue through July and August. Fuller information on all these aspects can be had by calling 383-8833.

Concerts, dance events, lectures, poetry readings, films and other special events will fill out the program, the projected activity including possibly lunch hour events, artists' seminars and more things for children's participation.

Star Wars: It Plays to the Kid in Everyone

Star Wars is the kind of movie that, as a kid, I waited through a lot of Saturday matinees to see. The children I know who've seen it are surprised and elated by its imaginativeness and exuberance. A 10-year-old friend of mine was so entranced that he scarcely wriggled during the two-hour screening. "I was so excited my neck hurt," he announced afterward. Growns are appearing to have an equally good time with the film — as they rediscover the kid in themselves.

George Lucas, who told us all about his adolescence in his first commercial success, American Graffiti, has spun out some childhood dreams in his scenario for Star Wars. On one level, it's a composite of Buck Rogers and "B" westerns — no messages, just an extravaganza of action and adventure. You might describe it as a space western where cowboy-like spacemen fly starships that travel faster-than-light. Its immediate charm is that of comic-strip science fiction coming to life.

But Lucas' space fantasy draws on the deeper roots of myth and fairytale. In a far-off galaxy, "a long, long time ago", dwells a wise and wonderful wizard called Obi-Wan Kenobi (Alec Guinness), an evil knight, Lord Darth Vader, a princess (Carrie Fisher), a roisterous, shrewd soldier of fortune, and a fledgling crusader who bears the evocative name of Luke Skywalker.

Their story is an account of an intergalactic clash between the powers of good and evil, between the Imperial Forces of the Galactic Empire, who hold a thousand star systems in bondage, and a handful of rebels who seek their release. The ruthless leader of the Empire, the Grand Moff Tarkin (Peter Cushing), has built himself a gigantic space station which he has christened the Death Star, and from which, with the aid of a colossal energy force, he can burn out a planet in seconds. The rebels are intent on blasting the Death Star from the sky.

Leading the rebellion is Princess Leia, a bright, spunky young woman who handles a laser gun as effectively as her male followers. Leia, of course, is captured by Tarkin, but before she's locked up she manages to send two of her android assistants off into space to search for the wizard. Obi-Wan Kenobi commands a mysterious force which is the rebels' only salvation, but he must be brought, at great peril, from his home planet through deep space to work his magic. Luke comes too, squeaky-clean, and fresh from his farm, accompanied by Leia's androids — R2D2, a mobile computer that looks like a cross between a coffee-grinder and a post-box, and C-3PO, a mechanized translator who speaks in a well-bred English accent, wears a gold-plated human shape, and fusses like a valet with too much time on his hands.

Journeys across other-world landscapes, encounters with extraordinary creatures of every dimension, dog-fights in space, and faster-than-light travel across fields of stars, prepare us for a duel to the death with laser sabers between the old wizard and Lord Vader, and a climactic assault on the Death Star. Best of all, for everyone concerned, there is a happy ending, and the possibility of a sequel.

Lucas' images are extraordinary. He combines the pop-art, comic-book images of interstellar space with a sort of Teutonic atmosphere, to fantastic effect. The warriors are dressed in plastic suits of armor and goose-step march through the Death Star's architectural wonders. And the princess and Luke Skywalker, who are mostly clothed in pseudo-medieval garb, look as though they might have trod the paths of Sherwood Forest with Robin Hood.

Star Wars works as fantasy because it is played absolutely straight. The characters are mythic in proportion, and as predictable as their counterparts in fairytales. There's no ambiguity about anyone's position — the lines between good and evil have been clearly drawn. The heroes and the heroine are noble and spirited; the villains are treacherous and forever wicked. The movie is a romantic adventure in the truest sense.

In our kid's hearts, we've yearned for movies like this one for along time, so a critical perspective on Star Wars seems unwarranted. Lucas isn't trying to invite an intellectual response, he just wants us to have a good time. All he asks is that we suspend disbelief, and trust in his spirit of adventure. It's all a little like a star child's version of the Brothers Grimm.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JULY 10

By Sydney Omarr

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Whirlpool of emotions could dominate — requests from children, mate or lover "add up" and you begin to survey costs. Key is to maintain emotional balance. Serious adjustment in domestic area occurs. This will work to your advantage, benefit. Hold tight to valuables. Don't give up something for nothing. You'll understand!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your position is firm, but you may not realize it. Accent individuality. Make requests, take long-range view, be aware of practical requirements. Defend your right to be secure — emotionally and where money is concerned. Partnership undergoes swift change.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be conservative — go slow. Don't waste time, emotions — or money. Consolidate — bring priorities into focus. Deal with responsible persons willing to back their beliefs with investments. Member of opposite sex could help you to rediscover love. Capricorn figures prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight creative change, willingness to end one phase and begin another — dedicate yourself to being rid of what is wasteful, outdated, unmod- ern and which drains you physically, emotionally and financially. You'll understand. Aries aids!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New start, added independence, love and affection — these are spotlighted. You become cognizant of responsibility. Another LEO is involved. Aquarius also is in picture. The number "1" figures prominently. You get to heart of matters. You win major point. Be gracious!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow through on hunch — dig deep for clues, additional information. One who inspires, teaches, provides spiritual insights is very much in picture. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons are part of scenario. Communications gap is evident. You need additional information. Study material. Don't accept or reject until you gain full-dimensional perspective.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money, bills, leases, checks, other people and inheritances — these all grab share of spotlight. Diversity. Be versatile. Be sociable. Travel indicated. Vacation spirit prevaills. Money pressure is present, but need not dominate. You'll see!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lie low. Become familiar with details, basic material. Accent on legalities, fine points, upsetting of tradition or usual ways of doing business. What has been routine no longer proves efficient. Know it and don't be caught off guard. Aquarius, Taurus, Leo figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Low-key approach should be advocated. Be analytical. Member of opposite sex is curious, but cannot be sure about you. Money, investments, personal possessions are very much in picture. Show that you are financially responsible without putting cash on line. You'll soon see why!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Highlight feelings, emotions, reconciliation with family. What appears a financial loss could rebound — in your favor. Don't sell yourself short. Your charm could become evident, especially where opposite sex is concerned. Yes, love is in picture!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Capricorn message — see beyond the immediate. Perceive hidden meanings, subtle nuances. Someone is trying to tell you something. Pisces, Virgo persons figure in picture. One "in command" makes major concession — and you could be beneficiary.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Steer clear of traffic, if possible. Mixed-up or confused directions lead to mishaps, accidents. Also, eschew arguments with relatives. On positive side, you get foothold in business, project which is due to yield major profit. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently. Yes, that "special person" cares, responds.

IF JULY 10th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are dynamic, vital, independent, sensual, stubborn. You are also creative, fond of luxury, somewhat extravagant, very attractive to opposite sex. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Significant changes occur in 1977 — March, September and December are indicated as outstanding months. If single, you marry. If married, there could be an addition to family. Married or single, you travel, create, express yourself in successful manner. You are an original thinker —

MONDAY, JULY 11

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on quick decisions, surprise trips, unusual experience involving relative and telephone. Be discerning. Check reports. Avoid self-deception. Gemini, Virgo and Pisces could figure in picture. Key is to put ideas to work. Steer clear of "wet blanket."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Much action where purchases, sales are concerned. Money, profits, personal possessions grab spotlight. Your career potential is brighter. What you own gains in value. Know it, be confident, refuse to sell yourself short. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently — so does the number "8".

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Wishes are fulfilled; your desires are contrasted to actual needs. The choice could be your own. Key is to let go of fantasy, to prepare for a more independent, creative future. Leo, Aquarius persons are part of scenario. Yes, romance is here — and you will feel needed, loved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone behind the scenes is "on your side." You get signal, a green light. You're given a chance to prove a major point. Aura of glamor is present. Member of opposite sex is drawn to you — and makes no secret of it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Study Cancer message. You have decision to make — it involves a choice between security and intrigue. Protect yourself from one who talks of quick gains, no preparation. Be mature enough to understand that no person is giving you something for nothing. Creative juices are stimulated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on feeling of achievement. You get verification, confirmation, green light. You are released from binding agreement. You have more freedom — socially and in professional area. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently — so does number "3".

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Diplomatic approach is best course. Don't attempt to force issues. Make intelligent concession to family member. Accent on learning process, publishing, journey, opening lines of communication. Long-range view is indicated — Aquarius, Scorpio, Taurus individuals figure in scenario. Yes, you get "notification."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be ready for change of scenery. Relationship is intensified. Nothing now is apt to be lukewarm — it is all or nothing, hot or cold. Accent on legal matter in connection with money due. Inheritance, lease, rental schedule, cash in escrow — these are spotlighted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are tempted to act on impulse. Key is to balance speculative urge with logic. Accent on opposition views, partnership. If single, marriage could be in picture. Married or single you're asked views on matter of public concern. You'll deal with property related to residence. Taurus, Libra figure prominently — so does the number "6".

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Low-key approach is best at this time. Emphasis on basic issues, employment and health. One behind scenes would like more control. Become familiar with fine points, fine print — take nothing for granted. Subtle nuances can be detected if you make an extra effort. You'll understand!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are involved, lively and you could fall madly in love. Variety of experiences are featured — routine is changed and status quo ceases to exist. Raunchy children are part of scenario. Feelings dominate — creative juices flow. Give of yourself, imprint style.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get "action" on investment questions, procedures. You have opportunity to break out of confining situation. Let go of what appears to be a "security blanket." Strive toward a more independent course.

IF JULY 11th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are intuitive, a natural teacher; you are unorthodox, fascinated with astrology, drawn to drama and unique ways of presenting projects and products. You could succeed in advertising, television and restaurant management. Aquarius, Leo, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. Emphasis this year is on where you live — and domestic situation in general. February, September and November are your most memorable months of 1977.

FAMILY BIKE RIDE ON JULY 17

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — One night Harry the wife beater exploded.

He heaved a can of beer at his spouse, striking her on the face and splitting her lip.

Then he ripped off her clothing, beat her with the hooks on her brassiere, burned her body with cigarettes, threw her into a tub of scalding water and kicked her in the groin so hard she may need a hysterectomy.

When he passed out from the beer, she called police. "And that's not such an atypical case," said Barbara Hart, an attorney with Central Pennsylvania Legal Services who recently counseled Harry's wife.

"The Pennsylvania legislation has hammered home an important point," said Hart. "It lets people know that not only does the man's wife take exception to the beating, but so does society."

Under the law, a woman (or a man) can petition the court for protection or ask that an abusing spouse be evicted from the house for up to one year. No criminal charges are involved.

A ruling must be made within 10 days. In extreme cases a temporary immediate eviction order is issued. The law also covers child abuse.

Although not specifically written into the act, the evicted husband usually is ordered by the judge to provide some sort of financial support until the matter is resolved.

Until the law went into effect Dec. 6, the only recourse battered women had was to file criminal complaints. Even severely abused wives were reluctant to take action that might send to jail the men they depend upon for financial security.

Records kept by social workers and community legal service groups show the new act as being implemented regularly and with success.

"We had one woman who had been beaten for years and had been in our shelter several times," said Sue Bienemann, director of the Women in Crisis shelter in Harrisburg. "When we took her to the judge to present her petition, she had several broken bones, a huge black eye and swollen lips. The judge immediately granted her petition and her husband moved out."

At last count, 84 petitions had been brought under the act in Philadelphia, and 84 protection or eviction orders granted. Similar success is reported in Pittsburgh.

Pennsylvania is experimenting with a five-month-old law that already has provided speedy legal relief for abused women.

"The district attorney is actually sending people to us to try to get protection orders under Act 218 instead of filing criminal actions," said Ben Josephs, managing attorney for Community Legal Services here.

"You used to walk into City Hall any Monday morning and there would be a line of women with their heads bashed in waiting to file a criminal complaint. No more."

The reluctance of police to interfere in family spats is understandable. Forty per cent of all police injuries and 25 per cent of deaths in the line of duty occur on domestic violence calls. The act does not give police specific authority to arrest in case of violation of an order.

If a man continues to abuse his wife or housemate or returns to the home after being evicted, a woman may petition to have him held in contempt of court. He then can be fined or jailed, but the contempt proceeding often is complex and time consuming, and the woman has little protection in the interim.

Wife abuse cuts across class, ethnic and economic lines. Although the wife beater commonly is portrayed as a blue-collar worker who drinks too much, the stereotype is untrue, said Albert L. Mills, assistant police superintendent in Pittsburgh.

"We get more calls from low-income areas about wife beating," he said, "but that's because there is a stigma attached to calling the police in more affluent neighborhoods."

"Middle-class women just get a cab, go to their private physician or a hospital and say they've fallen down the stairs."

Many psychologists say the problem of domestic violence is rooted in society's assumption that a man's wife is his property and he has the right to do what he likes with her.

"It's a male-dominated system and as long as the prevailing notion is that women were created to serve men, wife abuse will go on," said Jennifer Fleming, a Philadelphia social worker who has worked with battered women. "It's part of the same mentality that condones rape."

THE WINDS OF CHANGE ARE BLOWING

About the time we're beginning to get used to the idea of "going metric", we American chess players find we shall have to "go algebraic" as well. The International Chess Federation at its meeting in Haifa has made it official: After 1978, all games played in FIDE tournaments and included books and magazines printed by the International Chess Federation, will have to be in algebraic notation.

Actually, it is already used by almost every country in the world, except the U.S., Argentina and Spain.

The algebraic notation is a convenient, co-ordinate system of identifying each square on the chess board. The left hand corner square is a1, (in the descriptive notation, that is Q-R1 for White). In the algebraic notation, it is a1 not only for White but for Black as well!! Thus we continue to the right with b, c, d, e, f, g, and h. The ranks are numbered 1 to 8. The locations and moves for both White and Black are always read from White's side of the board, or lower side of the diagram. For example White's Queen square is "d1" and White's King Rook square is "h1", whereas Black's King Rook square is "h8".

Let us see how we would write down the first four moves of a game in both notations

Algebraic and Descriptive

- | | |
|-----------|--------|
| 1. d2-d4 | f7-f5 |
| 2. e2-e4 | f5xg4 |
| 3. Nf1-c3 | Ng8-f6 |
| 4. Bc1-g5 | Nb8-c6 |

- | | |
|----------|-------|
| 1. P-Q4 | P-KB4 |
| 2. P-K4 | PxP |
| 3. N-QB3 | N-KB3 |
| 4. B-KN5 | N-B3 |

Sometimes an abridged notation is used whereby only the square of arrival is given and when a move to a vacant square is given, the hyphen is also omitted. e4 means a pawn moves to square e4, likewise, h5 means that a Rook moves to square h5.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. K-N4, RxN5ch; 2. PxR mate; or 1... RxN4ch; 2. QxR mate; or 1... RxP; 2. Q-B7 mate, etc.

On-Job Smoking Study

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — People who smoke at work—who they are and how many cigarettes they smoke each day—will be the subject of a survey to be conducted by the Waterloo Regional Lung Association.

Pam Nancarrow, program coordinator, said the study will also try to learn about the reactions of smokers' co-workers who don't smoke.

Smoking on the job has never been studied, she said. "There have been studies done on smoking in schools, public places... everything but smoking in industry."

To fill this gap, 3,800 people in five industries in the Waterloo Region will be questioned this summer on their smoking habits and attitudes to smoking on the job.

The sample includes food and clothing workers, management, labor and industrial nurses.

The study is financed by the national health and welfare ministry.

Ms. Nancarrow is interested in the costs of smoking—not only to the employee but also to the public and the employer.

In the United States, $800 million is spent annually helping people who have illnesses directly related to smoking, she said. Comparative figures for Canada are not available.

Carbon monoxide, one of the byproducts of tobacco smoke, "goes straight into the blood stream," said Ms. Nancarrow.

"It knocks the oxygen out of the blood stream, goes to the brain and then starts reacting on you," she said. "The person becomes less efficient, less productive. Some people get giddy. The ultimate reaction is death."

In addition to the time lost lighting and smoking the cigarette, studies show that smokers are off work up to 15 days more each year than non-smokers, she said.

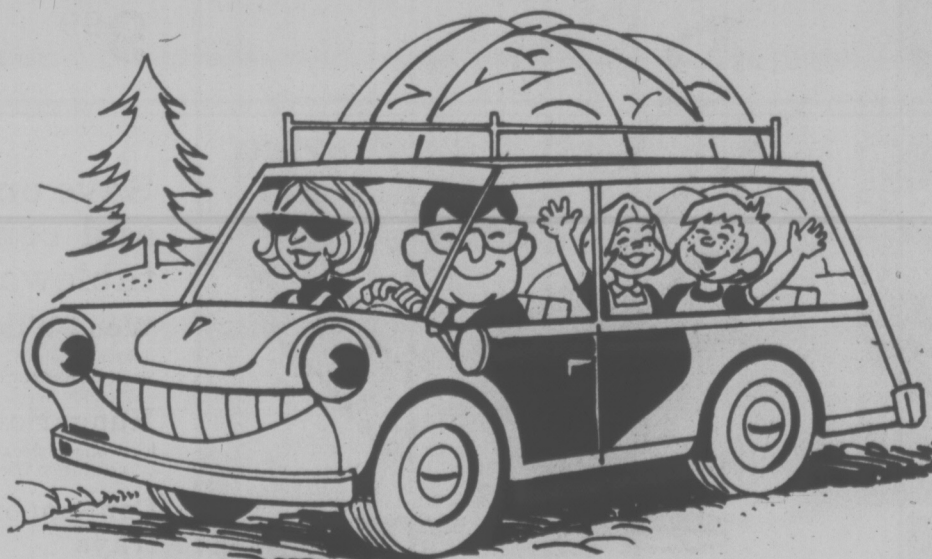

The survey will also look at the non-smoker who is exposed to second-hand smoke.

Second-hand smoke contains high levels of carbon monoxide and more than 1,000 different chemicals as well as tar and nicotine, she said.

Paris to Award Clean Canines

PARIS — Mayor Jacques Chirac has decided the French capital is so filthy that it is time to clean it up and he has asked Parisians to nominate clean-living dogs for a medal. The campaign is designed to make the capital spick-and-span for the summer tourist season.

Dogs come under the Chirac spotlight as a major source of pollution and Parisians have been asked to ensure that their dogs use the gutter rather than the sidewalk for their toilet. A special medal is being offered to dogs that do not pollute the sidewalks.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. — The "monster" that ate Water Flick's ducklings is in a lot of hot water. More precisely, he's at a Chinese restaurant being made into turtle soup. Flick's two-year battle to find what was eating the ducks in the pond behind his house ended this week when he pumped out the pond and discovered a 38-pound snapping turtle at the bottom.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dumping horse manure in the town hall is not an expression of free speech, a local justice has ruled. Salina Town Justice Herman Harding convicted Henry Kindt of Thursday of disorderly conduct for dumping manure in the town hall. Kindt had claimed town officials weren't enforcing the zoning laws.

SAINT TROPEZ, France — British actor Peter Sellers rested in a clinic here Friday and vigorously denied rumors that he had suffered a heart attack. "I just came in here for a regular blood check, which you have to have when you have a heart pacemaker like me," he said in a telephone interview.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Groucho Marx's companion, Canadian-born Erin Fleming, accused of abusing him physically and mentally, stated in a court deposition that she

Stetsons Crown Princes

CALGARY (CP) — There was more than one good guy in a white Stetson hat Friday when Prince Charles rode up to open the Calgary Stampede.

The heir to the British throne and his younger brother Prince Andrew, 17, sat through a thunderstorm to receive a standing ovation from the crowd of 22,000 at the official opening.

"I won't keep you standing in the rain, because I am sure you want to go home as soon as I have opened the Stampede," said Prince Charles, 23, wearing a white Stetson, cowboy boots, a buckskin shirt and blue jeans.

The shirt was a present from Peigan Indian Chief Nelson Small Legs Sr., whose reserve the prince visited Thursday.

The prince rode as grand marshal in the opening parade earlier and was applauded by a crowd of thousands under a hot sun and blue skies.

"I am glad you enjoyed me riding in the parade," he said at the official opening ceremony. "I dare say, you hoped I was going to fall off."

With typical western modesty, Dale Trotter, 28, of Calgary, six-time world bareback champion, gave Prince Charles an autographed picture of himself.

Trotter explained some of the tricks of the trade to the prince behind the chutes and later Charles talked to other rodeo stars and expressed an interest in seeing the Brahma bulls.

Andrew To Charles: 'Shut Up'

CALGARY (CP) — Prince Charles, 28, was told by his younger brother Andrew, 17, to "shut up" when he suggested Andrew, approach a young woman, the queen of the Calgary Stampede said Friday.

Queen Gillian Newman, 20, met the Royal brothers with her two Stampede princesses.

Charles said "Look at these gorgeous girls Andrew," Gillian said.

"Then he said to Andrew, 'What are you standing around for?'"

But an embarrassed Prince Andrew, said Gillian, turned to reply, "Shut up, Charles."

The girls said they thought the princes charming and would not mind going out with either of them.

loved the 85-year-old comedian with all her heart and he had repeatedly proposed to her. Miss Fleming, 36, from New Liskeard, Ont., said she turned down Marx's proposals because of a wish to have children.

ALLENWOOD, Pa. — Convicted Watergate burglar G. Gordon Liddy was one of 530 inmates who staged a hunger strike at the Allenwood federal minimum security prison, and authorities indicate the action could cloud his application for parole. The strike ended Friday after all but 10 of the 540 inmates at the prison boycotted dinner Thursday and breakfast and lunch Friday to protest a rearrangement of their living quarters.

Billy Leaves, Beer Blamed

FORT WORTH, Tex. — Billy Carter, the U.S. president's brother, angrily walked out of a charity dinner Friday night, contending the event was too political.

But Ruth Carter Stapleton blamed her brother's walkout on too much beer. "He just had one beer too many."

The Carters were attending a "Miss Lillian Scholarship Fund Raiser," a program run on behalf of their mother, Lillian Carter.

TRIP ENDS IN HORROR

PROSPECT HEIGHTS, Ill. — Gerald Schubring and his family, back from a camping trip, pushed open their front door in this comfortable suburb and felt horror: vandals had kicked through eight walls, slashed furniture, strewn food about — and stolen almost nothing.

Schubring's stunned wife Carol sized it up: "They came to destroy, and boy, they did a beautiful job. Two tape recorders and a clock radio are the only things missing."

"There was total destruction everywhere and all I could do was scream, 'Oh, My God,'" she said.

"Steaks, roasts, a gallon of sourdough starter and other food was thrown all over the place."

"Two glass chandeliers were smashed as if they were swinging on them. They poured liquid detergent on our bed and poured oil inside and out of our 1976 auto parked in the garage. They put Kitty Litter on our dining room table."

"They took all our slides and dumped them all over the place, ripped up our protector screen, knocked in the television picture tube and completely dismantled our eight-track tape player."

"The hedge clippers were lodged in the ceiling of the family room and a knife was stuck in the wall. One hole in a wall upstairs was big enough to walk through."

Gerald Schubring is a 38-year-old computer analyst who lives with his wife and four children in this quiet suburb northwest of Chicago where the homes are worth an average of $90,000 to $100,000.

Samaritan's Life 'Hell'

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Preston Henley played Good Samaritan Friday night and he's paying for it today.

He's bruised, battered and terrified.

Life has become hell, he said today, and he's afraid to venture out of the door of his home at 30 San Jose.

Henley, 36, a child care worker, was gang-stomped about 10 p.m. when he intervened after two youths shoved a girl off her bicycle.

Henley, who was out walking with his wife in the James Bay area, went to aid the girl. One youth fled and the other became abusive and threatened to kill him.

Henley said he asked his wife to call police and while she was away the youths who had run off returned with six or seven companions.

The gang surrounded him and the next thing Henley knew he was on the ground and the youths were kicking him in the face and body.

Henley said he managed to break loose, ran to a nearby house, burst through the door and screamed for help.

Police arrived and arrested two 17-year-old youths and a juvenile. The others fled.

The three have been charged with assault causing bodily harm. They were released from custody this morning after appearing before a justice of the peace.

Henley said he spent two hours in the emergency ward of Victoria General Hospital being treated for his injuries.

He said he was threatened by the youths, who call themselves the James Bay gang.

"One told me he was going to slash the tires on my car and burn my house down," he said.

Henley said he is terrified of repercussions.

He said he asked police for protection but "they didn't seem to think I need it."

Henley met today with Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber, who said he will use the beating-up to press for re-institution of police foot patrols in the James Bay area.

Hijackers To Free Hostages

KUWAIT (Reuters) — Arab hijackers agreed today to release all hostages aboard a Kuwait Airways plane in return for the hijackers' safe passage to Southern Yemen.

A number of hostages were released from the Boeing 707 Friday night and early today. The aircraft was hijacked Friday by 12 gunmen who have not been identified definitely.

Airport sources said two of the hijackers went from the plane to the terminal building for negotiations with Kuwait's defence minister, Sheikh Saad al-Abdullah al-Sabah, who has been conducting talks with the gunmen as the jet stood on the tarmac under Kuwait's broiling desert sun.

It was not immediately known if the hijackers were granted their demand for the release of 300 persons imprisoned in Arab jails.

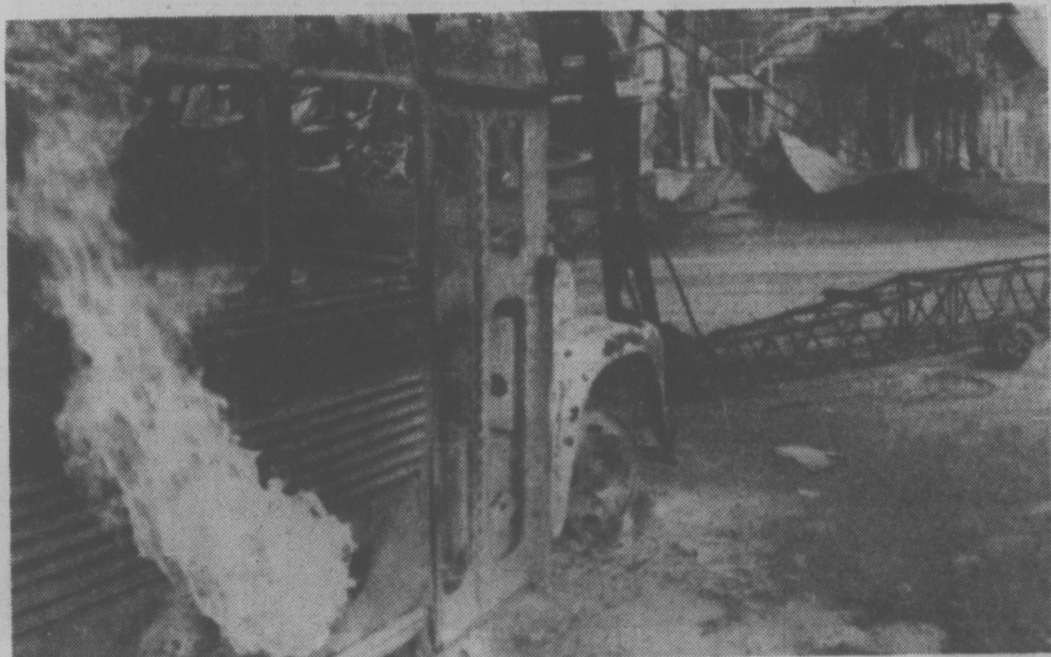

There were about 55 passengers and crew aboard the plane when it took off from Beirut on its flight to Kuwait. Ten passengers were released Friday night and three of the five British crew members, including two stewardesses, today.

One diplomatic report in Beirut said only seven hostages still were aboard the plane, including Kuwait's ambassador to Lebanon, Abdel-Hamid Bejan.

trols in the James Bay area. "There have been too many of these kinds of incidents going on here. It's time something was done," Barber said.

Behind burning bus is turbine building gutted in Friday night explosion

Blast Kills One, Injures Six ... Halts Alaska Oil Flow

PUMP STATION No. 8, Alaska (AP) — Oil will resume flowing through the Alaskan pipeline only after engineers are sure they have pinpointed the cause of an explosion that tore through the main building of a pump station here, killing one worker and injuring six others.

One pump station worker, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press that the explosion was caused by the apparent malfunction of a check valve in the oil pipeline.

The $7.7-billion pipeline was shut down Friday after the explosion and resulting fire left the pump house building a blackened and twisted maze of structural steel. The pipeline itself was not damaged.

Five persons were admitted to hospital after the explosion and a sixth person was treated and released, authorities said. None of those admitted to hospital was in serious condition.

It was the second time this week that Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. had been forced to close the line. On Monday, the first flow of oil through the 800-mile pipeline was shut off for 64 hours after a crack was discovered in a pipe just outside the pump station.

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. officials were unable to say when the oil would start flowing again. The oil flow, which began June 20, had been almost exactly on schedule despite the earlier shutdown. Alyeska had expected the first oil to arrive in Valdez about July 20.

John Ratterman, an Alyeska spokesman, said: "The preliminary thinking is that we can run oil through the station without using the pumps or turbines. We do not think, on a preliminary basis, that there will be a long down time."

State pipeline co-ordinator Chuck Champion said theoretically it would not be difficult to bypass the pump station. It could be done merely by turning a valve at the manifold station.

The pipeline is connected to the pump station through a separate section of pipe that originates in the manifold building. That building apparently was not seriously damaged.

While other pumps can take up the slack, Champion noted that engineers likely will want to check the pumps at the other 11 pump stations on the line. This might take several days, he said.

The roof and sides of the pump house were blown away by the explosion at 3:45 p.m. The blast sent a huge plume of smoke into the air.

It took firemen about two hours to bring the flames under control. The workman's body was found in the rubble a couple of hours after the blast.

FLOODS KILL 159 KOREANS

SEOUL (AP) — Torrential rains triggered floods and landslides near the South Korean capital today, killing 159 persons, authorities said.

At least 84 others were missing and thousands left homeless.

Heavy rainfall, up to 16 inches, began Friday and flooded low-lying areas south of the Han River which runs through the heart of the capital.

B.C. Fed Wants General Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor is asking members to give it power to call a province-wide general strike to block current and any future "union-busting Social Credit" legislation.

"We are asking affiliates to give the federation executive council the right to call province-wide industrial action ... and that includes shutting down the province," federation secretary-treasurer Len Guy said Friday at a news conference.

Guy said union executives throughout B.C. will be asked to determine, by means decided at the local level, whether members support giving the federation, power to call a strike. The polling process is expected to take two to three weeks.

"If we have a substantial majority, we'll go ahead," Guy said.

The decision to call for strike-power was made unanimously earlier Friday at an emergency union conference. Guy said it was attended by representatives of most federation-affiliated unions to discuss how to fight two government bills now before the legislature, Bill 65, the Community Resources Board Amendment Act, 1977, and Bill 68, the Notre Dame University of Nelson Act, 1977.

The bills would wipe out four union locals, said Guy. They are the Faculty Association of Notre Dame University (FANDU), a local of the Association of Clerical and Technical Employees (ACTE), and the Vancouver Resources Board locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), the Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union (VRMU) and the Social Services Employees Union (SSEU).

Both Guy and federation president George Johnston said the federation will seek a meeting with the cabinet to persuade it to drop Bills 65 and 68.

If that fails, they said, the federation will lobby all MLAs and mount a letter-writing campaign to the cabinet as well as issue pamphlets to "warn British Columbians about the insidious nature of this legislation."

Although only 44 per cent of B.C. workers are unionized and about three-quarters of those (240,000 workers) are affiliated with the federation, Guy said he was confident the federation will receive full support.

He said organized labor in the past has shut B.C. down and "I'm confident it won't be found wanting this time if called upon."

Asked whether the strike call might involve only a one-day stoppage, Guy said: "It would be whatever is necessary."

In Victoria, Labor Minister Allan Williams had no comment other than to say, "We'll just have to see what happens."

He also refused comment when asked whether the labor department had a hand in framing the bills introduced by Education Minister Pat McGeer and Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

PALMER (UPI) — Two minor earthquakes rumbled through an area around Anchorage Friday, shaking residents but causing no damage.

REPRINTING LOTTERY TICKETS RULED LEGAL

TORONTO (CP) — The printing and reselling of government lottery tickets was ruled legal by an Ontario provincial court judge Friday.

Judge Harold Rice said a scheme operated by Lawrence Bernard Austin, 27, and David Eugene Auen, 46, both of Toronto, did not breach Section 189 of the Criminal Code which covers lotteries.

Evidence showed the two men bought blocks of Loto-Canada tickets, reprinted each one 10,000 times and sold them in books of 990 to distributors for between $6.60 and $11.50 a book.

The distributors then resold them to retail outlets for a $5 profit to be handed out free under the name of Loto shares as a promotional gimmick to customers coming into the stores.

Anyone with a winning number received one ten-thousandth of the Loto-Canada prize.

Judge Rice ruled that the two were not running a lottery of their own, but were cashing in on the popularity of the government-run lottery.

"Some may think that the accused abused the meaning of the Lotteries Act," he said. "But if Parliament wished to prevent the resale of lottery tickets, it must make the law clearer."

Air Canada Talks Break

MONTREAL (CP) — Conciliation talks between Air Canada and its 2,700 flight attendants have broken off and the two sides are waiting to see what Labor Minister John Munro does next in the dispute.

Bernard Belanger, a negotiator for the Canadian Air Line Flight Attendants Association, confirmed in an interview here Friday that conciliation efforts in Ottawa came to an end with no agreement in sight.

Working conditions rather than money were the major stumbling blocks, he noted. But he declined to list the major unresolved issues, saying no strike vote has yet been held.

Munro can opt for a conciliation commissioner or conciliation board to study the issues and make non-binding recommendations. He could also appoint a special mediator to try to find a solution.

Meanwhile, Air Canada's 1,500 pilots and flight officers have approved a new contract hammered out last month, an official of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA) said Friday.

Capt. Robert MacKinnon, CALPA's chief Air Canada representative, said in an interview that 62.8 per cent of the ratification vote favored the terms.

The contract, which is retroactive to last Dec. 1 and runs until next Jan. 30, includes a 6.1 per cent wage increase and improved duty-scheduling provisions.

Average salary for an Air Canada pilot will increase to about $40,000 from $38,000.

The company has established itself in its own hangar at the Winnipeg International Airport, and is in the process of issuing tickets to its passengers.

However, the operation is being eyed by existing commercial carriers as a threat to their very existence.

It is easy to understand the reasons behind the formation of the airline.

Company general manager Douglas Eryou puts it simply: "There's been a history of outsiders coming in and making money out of the air service at the expense of the native people."

Former Manitoba Indian Brotherhood president Dave Courchene, who has been hired as a consultant to the airline, was a bit more blunt.

He said "it's been in the works for 100 years. Indians have never had anything and its about time they had. It's way past due. We once owned the country. So, what the hell's a little airline?"

Two Pulp Unions Veto Last Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pulp union negotiators unanimously rejected the final offer of pulp industry Friday, but stopped short of breaking off negotiations.

Employers laid their final position of a $1-an-hour increase over two years before the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) in a morning negotiating session.

The two unions, bargaining jointly, met in caucus session all afternoon before saying they are rejecting the proposal. The unions were to meet again today to determine what their strategy now will be.

Previous pulp contracts for the 13,500 workers expired June 30. Neither union has taken a strike vote.

The unions said the offer was unacceptable because the employers have not discussed pensions, cost-of-living protection and the banking of overtime.

Both Gruntman and Stan Shewaga, the other caucus spokesman, agreed a break-off of negotiations was a possibility but not for juggling it.

The companies stressed that their offer was a final position and there was room for clarification of the package but not for juggling it.

The package included a 50-cent-an-hour increase this year and another 50 cents next year, plus the rolling in of a cost-of-living payment of 12 cents an hour that workers already are receiving in the base rate.

Thieves Bilk Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — A well-organized group of fraud artists has bilked area branches of the Bank of Montreal of a total of $12,000 in two days by impersonating customers.

Bank officials said Friday that the thieves, who had gained access to customer names, account numbers and signature samples, attempted to withdraw $19,000.

On Thursday and Friday, the thieves used their customer information to fill out cheques or withdrawal slips, usually for several hundred dollars each.

The scheme was uncovered in a branch by a teller supervisor who knew the customer whose account was being tapped by an impersonator. The man fled.

Thirteen incidents Thursday netted the thieves $7,000 from Bank of Montreal branches, and six incidents Friday gained $6,000. An additional five attempts to withdraw $6,000 failed, officials said.

Bill Dalton, the Bank of Montreal's administration manager for B.C. and the Yukon, said regular customers can expect a closer than normal scrutiny of cheques and withdrawal slips "for the next little while."

Dalton speculated that the customer information could have come from mail thefts of bank statements.

Indians Duck Rules, Start Own Airline

By FRED CLEVERLEY
Special to The Times

WINNIPEG — Four Indian bands in northern Manitoba have established their own scheduled airline, neatly bypassing all the formalities usually required by the Canadian Transportation Commission for such an operation.

The four bands have taken the attitude that their airline is similar to a private company aircraft, and no formal licensing is required.

However, if the ministry of transport allows the operation to continue, it could easily disrupt the air transportation system throughout all of northern Canada.

The airline started operations last week. Only after the inaugural flight did it write to the air transport committee of the Canadian Transport Commission, asking if the commission agreed that it is operating outside the regulations laid down for commercial carriers, and suggesting it can continue without any formal application to the regulatory body.

The new operation is called Anishinewo-Pimaganan Inc. Cree dialect for "Indian Flying Machine." The company has one transport aircraft, a Saunders ST-27 purchased from the Manitoba Development Corporation, which owns the assets of the bankrupt government aircraft plant, located at Gimli, 60 miles north of Winnipeg. Although the asking price for the machine was in excess of $500,000, officials are tight-lipped about financing, except to insist that no government money is involved.

Within the first week of operations, the company has already made public its plans to acquire additional aircraft, smaller machines with which to establish a "feeder service" for its main run, which consists of four scheduled flights a day between Winnipeg and Island Lake, a community some 350 miles to the north.

Swinging London may be be-decked with bunting but streets are grubby, food's dull and people are surly, says Max Low.

London: Flags and Filth

HEATHROW AIRPORT. London, Eng. — Time to sit and reflect now on the folly of all this.

It hadn't seemed such a bad idea at the time — a quick decision to fly from Victoria for a reunion with my brother Michael, who is an actor here, and my sister Diane, who had travelled here from Bougainville Island in Papua New Guinea where she lives. After all, I hadn't seen my brother for almost 10 years or my sister for 12 years.

But that was 12 days ago. In between, I've had to overcome my great fear of flying (though I'll tell you more of that in a later episode), had a few illusions shattered, and have been left with mixed feelings of depression, and gratitude — that I live in Canada.

Oh, the reunion itself was marvellous. My brother whisked us around on a whirlwind tour of the best stage shows in London, including a grand bash at the spectacular Talk of the Town nightclub. And I must report that, once you get used to the warm beer, the little old pubs are still the best in the world.

Wimbledon, too, was big thrill even though I'd made my decision to come over too late to qualify for press seats. Still, the TV coverage was excellent and thanks to Jubilee Year and to Glynn's feat the atmosphere was sensational. And the very British commentators give you quite a few chuckles with their remarks like: "Oh, I say, extraordinary shot!"

As I wait now for another of those huge Air Canada jumbo jets to take me home, I cherish a few good memories. Of buskers playing on Oxford Street; the unlikely sight of men's teams playing the Canadian game of field lacrosse on Clapham Common; the rabble of Carnaby Street; of shopping in that mixing pot of the worlds races — the Portobello Road market — and of a little old lady of 91 leading a sing-along while others talked of doom from their soap boxes on Hyde Park's Speakers' Corner.

But unfortunately the strongest memory I'll have when I return is one of dirt and despondency. In the 10 years since I was last here, Britain — or London at any rate — has gone down hill drastically. And the sad thing is that no one there seems to care.

Everywhere you go, Londoners readily tell you how "grim" it is "ere now. There's a hopeless feeling at the exorbitant prices (many things such as food and clothing are about the same as they are in Canada despite the fact that wages here are only a third as much as back home).

Often, things cost much more here, such as gasoline — or petrol as they call it — at around $1.65 a gallon. And a man who earns a mere $120 a week and only takes home two-thirds of that told me it costs him almost $500 a year to insure his quite-ordinary car plus another $100 a year for road taxes so he can drive it!

Food is dull compared with ours and the service is shocking. The English, once famous for their manners, have become surly (at least the ones I struck) and don't seem to want to help you.

A big part of the problem stems from the resentment at the great number of foreigners living here, especially blacks from Africa and the West Indies.

Many Londoners made it clear they don't like it.

As an old guy in a green-grocers in Ruislip warned me:

"Don't go near Brixton. There's nuffin but blacks all over the place. It'll frighten yer to death!"

Yet the biggest single shock is the flags and filth in Elizabeth's Jubilee Year.

All the way down the Mall are glorious flags and bunting, and stores, and even many homes, proudly carry giant pictures of the Queen, yet beneath them the gutters are full of papers, empty coke cans and other garbage blowing in the wind.

Often, it's hard to find a garbage bin but again the sad thing is that no one bothers to look. They just throw it down where they are. And no one seems to care.

I stopped once to ask a young man the way on the Underground and, after he'd told me, he ventured:

"It's terrible 'ere now. It's filthy. There's so many foreigners. They're everywhere."

Then he added wistfully:

"I wish I lived in Canada ... you're lucky."

And I knew he was right.

FARMERS FEAR WATER COSTS

Joe Taylor is a dairy farmer in Central Saanich who has a particular reason for urging an assured water supply be brought north on the Saanich Peninsula in a hurry.

If there's an interim period of a year or two when farmers have to pay the domestic water rate for irrigation water, he said today, it's going to price them out of business.

And, he said, people from Esquimalt to Land's End Road benefit from farming in Central Saanich. Those farms help keep local food prices in line and they produce the greenbelt city people say they want.

Taylor is a member of the Saanich Peninsula Water Commission, organized this year to bring a bulk supply of water to peninsula communities who have been depending on overtaxed wells and Elk Lake.

Connecting the peninsula with the water system of the Greater Victoria Water district at the south end of Beaver Lake Park, the commission plans on building a trunk only as far as Martin's in a first phase, extending it to Sidney in the following year or so.

But until the domestic system for the peninsula is complete, the farmers will apparently have to pay the rate of close to $2 per 1,000 gallons for irrigating water. Some farms have their own wells. The other farmers simply won't be able to afford that, Taylor said.

Once the new trunk is operating, farmers should be able to get cheaper water from the old sources, the municipal wells and Elk Lake.

But it's the interim period which worries Taylor. He said today he would like to see the trunk pushed through to Sidney as quickly as possible.

The commission Thursday decided to see what help is available from the federal Agriculture and Rural Development Assistance program.

Water supply is the key to farming on the peninsula. Taylor said, noting that about 80 per cent of Central Saanich is within the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Berry Festival Sun Seen

A sunny day is forecast for the Saanich Strawberry Festival at Beaver Lake Park Sunday and the program includes everything from church service to square dancing.

Food is prominent on the agenda, with a pancake breakfast available at 9:15 a.m., a beef barbeque at noon and the traditional strawberries and ice cream served at 3:30 p.m. The municipality of Saanich charges 25 cents for this dish, with proceeds to charity.

A non-denominational church service will be held at 8:30 a.m., and the morning program includes an arts and crafts display and children's races, which start at 11 a.m.

A horseshoe pitching competition is booked for noon, followed by model boat display and demonstration, canoe and swimming races, Scottish dancing, horses, model aircraft and an entertainment group.

Square dancing starts at 6 p.m.

The Lonelyheart Letters Case

By DEREK SIDENIUS Times Staff

The Victoria Better Business Bureau is looking into an international "lonely hearts" correspondence scheme that operated out of Victoria earlier this year.

Bureau manager Bill Tindall said in an interview several thousand persons are believed to have been taken in by the scheme that promised to help people "make new friends world-wide through correspondence."

Tindall said the promise appeared in ads placed in as many as 250 newspapers throughout Canada, the United States, Great Britain, New Zealand and Australia in February and March.

While no one can come up with an accurate dollar figure on how much money poured into the scheme, Tindall believes several thousand dollars were netted through the Victoria operation.

None of the ads ran locally.

The ads invited readers to contact company called International Correspondence Services for details, and gave an address at 101-727 Johnson Street.

Tindall said the BBB investigation was sparked by a complaint from an elderly Vancouver woman.

The woman said she sent the company $10, received a list of people to write to, and then sent another $12 to subscribe to a monthly mailing list. That was in March.

She said she wrote to the company in June and her letter was returned advising ICS had gone out of business.

The BBB has subsequently confirmed the company has ceased to operate and that the man behind the scheme, identified as John R. Mills, has left the city. His present whereabouts are not known.

Tindall said Mills arrived in Victoria in mid-February and set up a mail-drop with the Telephone Answering Service (Victoria) Ltd., 727 Johnson.

Mrs. Peggie Smith, manager of the answering service said Mills contracted her firm to handle ICS mail for the month of March.

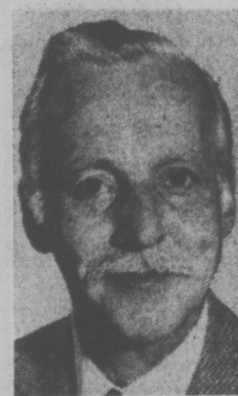

She said Mills indicated to her he was applying for a business licence but city licence inspector Jack Callan said he never heard from the man or the company. (Neither, for that matter, had the companies office).

Mills described his operation as a service aimed at helping lonely people around the world. Mrs. Smith said, He told her it had been tried in England and proved "very favorable there."

Mrs. Smith said mail for ICS started arriving in mid-March. The influx, she said, was fantastic.

On one day alone there were more than 300 letters.

The letters came from

... be wary

every part of the world. There was even one from Egypt.

She said either Mills or a woman she assumed was his wife picked up the mail each day.

"They were a really nice couple. Well groomed. You could tell they had a nice upbringing."

He was about 42, she said; the woman, in her mid-30s. Both were English.

She said in the beginning of April Mills suddenly told her he was leaving.

"He said he had a bit of a problem. He'd been told another company (International Correspondence Schools) had the same initials as his and said he could no longer use that title. He was very, very upset he might be sued and told me to return all the mail to the sender from that point on."

"I thought it a bit peculiar — him wanting me to return the mail — but I agreed because by that time the letters were dwindling off. All we were getting was the occasional letter and I could tell most were bills from newspapers. We sent them all back."

Mills and the woman have since vanished.

Tindall said several newspapers in the United States inquired with the BBB in February about the company.

He said he managed to contact Mills then and the man seemed quite indignant the BBB would question his trade practices.

Tindall said he suggested to Mills there could be a conflict if his company continued using the ICS initials but Mills denied there was a problem.

Tindall expects most people who fell for the scheme probably won't want to admit it because of the stigma attached to lonely heart clubs.

Tindall said the scheme points out the need to be wary of any mail order program.

"The best thing is don't get involved unless you have some assurance or indication the company is an established, stable business," he said.

"And having a mail drop for an address isn't exactly my idea of stability."

Car Crash Triggers House Flood

An 18-year-old youth was sent to hospital early today after the car he was driving smashed into the side of a vacant house breaking a water main inside.

Saanich police said David Gordon MacDonald, of 1161 Cloverly Terrace, was returning home at 4:15 a.m. when he apparently lost control of his car at McKenzie and Cedar Hill Crossroad and drove into the side of the house at 1185 McKenzie.

The crash severed a water line in a bathroom.

MacDonald was taken to Royal Jubilee with undetermined injuries, treated and released.

No damage figures were available.

By PAT DUFOUR Times Staff

Low-rental apartments and a recreation centre for senior citizens are part of a unique complex to be built by Cubbon Industries Ltd., at 1720 Cook.

Developed under a land-use contract with the city, the four-storey complex will replace the Cook landmark which was first developed in the 1910s by the Drysdale family as the Drysdale Sash and Door Company.

Cubbon Industries Ltd. is now owned by Bill Wansbrough, Norman Isherwood and Del Volk.

In a Times interview Wansbrough explained the new home supply centre, due to be completed in October, will occupy 15,000 square feet in two storeys on the side facing Cook.

The company owns 11 city lots — an area of 71,000 square feet. Wansbrough explained that spiralling taxation induced him and his partners to plan the centre-apartments-store complex.

Their taxes, he said, had risen from $4,373 in 1973 to $8,900 in 1976.

Isherwood said the project would never have been feasible without the cooperation of the city and both senior governments.

The apartment complex, to be completed next January, will contain 52 bachelor suites, 61 one-bedroom units and four two-bedroom units. On the main floor there will be eight apartments designed for the handicapped with special kitchen and bathroom facilities, oversize doors and other features.

Rents will range from $150 for a bachelor apartment to $220 for a two-bedroom unit.

Isherwood estimates construction costs for the senior citizens' recreation centre at $300,000. It will be open to any senior citizens and have its own separate entrance and lobby.

The 7,000 square foot centre will include a lounge, a games room, arts and crafts

"Loneliness is one of the hardest things for the elderly to face," Wansbrough said. "We're hoping our building will help overcome that."

Isherwood stressed that the recreation centre will be turned over to a non-profit organization, such as the Silver Threads Service, for operation.

Esquimalt alderman Ken Hill, president of the Silver Threads Service board, confirmed they had been approached by the company several months ago and have agreed in principle to operate the centre providing funding can be raised for permanent co-ordinating staff.
